Ottawa Approves Housing Projects

ISRAELI PLANES DOWN SYRIAN MiG

Israeli planes battled Syrian MiGs over Quneitra in the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights today and shot down one of them in a dogfight nearly two miles up, an Israeli military spokesman reported in Jerusalem.

It was the second outbreak of fighting between Israeli and Syrian forces this week. Ground forces battled in the Quneitra area earlier this week in the first such outbreak since the 1967 six-day war.

Fighting flared elsewhere along the cease-fire line with rockets reported landing in the town of Jericho.

Districts Get Loans for Land

OTTAWA (CP)—The government has displayed more of its housing policy by removing the freeze on public housing projects and promising loans to provinces and municipalities to buy land for private homes.

Robert Andras, minister without portfolio given responsibility for housing after Paul Hellyer resigned from the cabinet last month, announced removal of the freeze as the Commons opened second-reading debate on the government's housing bill Wednesday.

At a press conference today, Mr. Andras said the government will give "clear signals on the fate of 11 frozen urban renewal schemes within a matter of weeks." The policy decision on the freeze imposed last fall will follow an intense personal examination starting today.

STALLED PROJECTS

Five of the $40,000,000 worth of stalled projects are in B.C., at Cloverdale, Ladner, Port Coquitlam, Vancouver and New Westminster. Five are in Ontario and one is at Calgary.

The projects were frozen largely because of a government view that they tended to eliminate usable housing, thus intensifying the housing shortage.

Mr. Andras said he hoped there will be "an informal effect" on the nature of urban renewal applications in the light of the government's views.

He hoped the same effect would apply in the character of public housing projects. In both public housing and urban renewal, the government wants more emphasis on housing content and rehabilitation of existing buildings.

He doubted that his housing legislation, which includes the freeing of house mortgage interest rate, will result in an immediate decrease in the price of houses.

But ultimately the government moves to increase the supply of housing, build up serviced land banks and so on will have their effect.

INTEREST RATES

He said the theory is that mortgage interest rates—currently 9⅜ per cent—won't rise any higher when the rate is freed. Now it is set at 2¼ per cent above the government's bond rate.

Mr. Andras said the tendency is for the maximum established to become the minimum. The pegged rate gives lenders a "target to shoot at."

The bill removes interest ceilings on National Housing Act mortgages—now 9⅜ per cent—and much of the cabinet's control over Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

Informants said the government now favors row housing and dispersed accommodation rather than the big high-rise projects.

Mr. Andras also said he will amend the bill to permit provincial and municipal governments to borrow from Ottawa to buy land for building private houses.

The National Housing Act now provides for 90 per cent federal loans to provinces, municipalities or public housing agencies to buy and service land for public housing. The amendment would extend these loans to cover private housing as well.

Opposition criticism Wednesday focused mainly on the housing problems of low-income workers, high interest rates and growing land costs.

Troop Cutback 'Negotiable'

BRUSSELS (CP)—Canada appeared today to be yielding moderately to strong pressure from allies to ease its planned "phased reduction" of its NATO forces in Europe.

After sessions with NATO colleagues disenchanted with the Canadian proposal, Defence Minister Cadieux indicated to reporters Wednesday night that both the size and the timing of the Canadian cuts now are negotiable.

On Wednesday, a conference source released the first word that Canada was prepared to review its decision to reduce NATO forces but no details were released at that time.

A high American source said that the United States has urged the Canadian government to review its proposals—the outcome of a long reappraisal of foreign and defence policy. He added: "This is not the time for reduction."

While Cadieux refused to disclose figures on the size of the proposed Canadian cut in European forces, this official said the U.S. impression was that Canada wanted to slice them by two-thirds of strength.

These figures, the first specific suggestion of the size of the Canadian reductions, purported to be the American impression of what Cadieux told U.S. Defence Secretary Melvin Laird at a pre-meeting private session.

REFUSES TO SAY

Cadieux told reporters, in a sparring session in which he declined to reveal much, that the man who issued them must know more than he did. However, he refused to deny or confirm them.

The minister was playing the cards close to the vest here because the Canadian procedure is not to make public the reduction proposals until Cadieux reports to Parliament on June 2.

He made these points:

1. Canada hopes to have its European "adjustment" completed by 1972.

2. The existing brigade group of 5,500 men in West Germany would be replaced by a smaller mobile unit transportable by air. The size was unspecified, but Cadieux said it would be bigger than a regiment.

3. There would have to be "some reduction" in the size of the air division in West Germany, though the minister said this would "not necessarily" be the 20-per-cent cut planned for last year but deferred through 1969 after the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia alarmed NATO.

4. There would be a "study of all naval services in the near future."

N-War Guidelines Reviewed

LONDON (AP) — U.S. Defence Secretary Melvin Laird and six NATO colleagues opened talks today on guidelines for the use of nuclear weapons in Europe to protect the North Atlantic allies.

The defence ministers of the United States, Britain, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Turkey and Denmark had before them a top-secret study by Britain and West Germany on how the NATO nuclear might stationed in Europe can be used best to deter a Soviet attack.

Earlier British research showed that use of NATO's tactical nuclear weapons on a European battlefield and the Soviet retaliation that probably would follow would devastate the area. The possibility that West Germany would be the battlefield spurred the search for alternative tactics that might deter the Russians from an attack.

DEMONSTRATION BOMB

One suggestion was explosion of a "demonstration bomb" in an area where it could do little harm. The idea would be to warn the Soviets the West was prepared to use nuclear weapons if necessary.

Other proposals included the use of maritime nuclear explosions and atomic land mines on possible Soviet invasion routes.

British Defence Minister Denis Healey, co-author of the British-German study, has said that in the event of a major Soviet attack, NATO would have to surrender or use nuclear weapons within a few days because of the superior conventional striking force of the Soviet bloc. He says this superiority is more than 2 to 1 in infantry formations, nearly 2 to 1 in aircraft, and nearly 3 to 1 in armored units.

The Ra Sails On

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — Thor Heyerdahl's papyrus boat Ra gave its position today as 80 miles north of Lanzarote, the northeast island in the Canaries group, and said all was "going well" on the voyage across the Atlantic.

Norman Baker, the American navigator, said published reports that Dr. Yuri Cenkevich, the expedition's Russian medical officer, was ill with a high fever were erroneous.

The report from the Ra, which is attempting to prove Egyptians could have sailed to Latin America in papyrus boats centuries ago, was picked up by amateur radio operators here.

Offer Raised In Brewery Takeover Bid

By G. S. KENT
Times Business Editor

New York-based Philip Morris Corp. today raised its bid to take over Canada's largest brewing complex by $3 a share to $15 for a possible $163.2 million total value to Canadian Breweries Ltd. shareholders.

Meanwhile the Times learned in a telephone interview with the Canadian spokesmen for the takeover that buyers of Canbrew stock at lower recent prices will stand to make $30 million profit as a result of the bid.

A local investment dealer said he "would not rule out the possibility of an investigation of some kind."

The man who helped mastermind the Philip Morris bid is Ward C. Pitfield, Toronto, 43-year-old president of Pitfield, Mackay, Ross and Co., investment dealers, who said organization came from both sides of the border.

He said he had been "at it since last December," and that the current proposal for control of Canbrew came after "broad discussion" involving other prospective buyers.

Pitfield's firm heads a dealer syndicate representing Philip Morris to shareholders in Canada.

Pitfield's remarks came as some surprise to the investment community and mitigated against the notion that the offer for take over was American-inspired.

Pitfield said "it was our desire to take a firm hand in Canadian Breweries." He said it was felt that the 10 per cent ownership represented by Rothman's of Pall Mall Canada Ltd. was not sufficient to ensure the sort of growth expected.

Canbrew earnings have fallen consistently since 1965 and the company's share of the beer market has dropped from 48 per cent to about 35 per cent. Most of Canbrew's sales are in the U.S. and Britain.

Pitfield said a "meeting of minds" was reached with Philip Morris Corp., which was felt to have the management and marketing ideas needed by Canbrew to regain its position.

The U.S. company offered $12 per share for 50 per cent of the outstanding shares of Canadian Breweries, or a total of 10.88

COMING HOME to the command ship is the Apollo 10 lunar module after its close-up view of the moon's surface. (AP Wirephoto.)

Film Acts as Roadmap For Apollo 11 Crew

SPACE CENTRE, Houston (UPI) — The space agency today released breathtaking film and photographs shot by Apollos 10's moon pilots that will serve as a roadmap for man's first landing on the lunar surface in July.

As the film preview of man's first descent to the moon were released, the Apollo 11 astronauts who will make that landing made their first full-scale rehearsal of a lunar approach shown in the movies.

Astronauts Neil A. Armstrong and Edwin E. "Buz" Aldrin spent today in a moon landing simulator at Cape Kennedy, practising the final approach and landing with mission controllers in Houston as though it was the real thing.

It was the first simulation linking mission control and the astronauts at the cape, a space agency spokesman said. Many others will follow, the official said, to check every step of the flight to send Americans to walk the waterless lunar seas.

The 205 feet of movies released today were the second group of photographs made public from the Apollo 10 mission. There also were 87 frames of color still photography. All the shots were more spectacular than film released Wednesday.

Space agency geologist John Dietrich said Apollo 10's crewmen missed getting movies of the prime landing site as they swooped to within 9.5 miles of it, apparently because they jiggled the camera accidentally. But he said they got "perfect" scenes of the approach to that site.

Ship Crushes Two In Launch Mishap

COLLINGWOOD, Ont. (CP) — Two men were reported killed and at least 28 injured today when a 730-foot self-unloading cargo ship slid into the water accidentally minutes before it was to be launched at Collingwood Shipyards.

About 100 men were reported working under the boat when the accident occurred and company officials were not immediately certain how many escaped.

Divers began searching the water for injured men and an ambulance shuttle service was set up to take the injured to hospital.

Five of those taken to hospital suffered minor injuries and were released. The others required additional examination.

The 25,000-ton ship is believed the largest built at the shipyards.

The accident occurred when workers began to knock the stern blocks loose, and the ship suddenly began to slide into the water. The bow swung, trapping some men underneath.

U.S. Onslaught Rips Viet Truce

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. forces crashed a Viet Cong strategy meeting 28 miles northwest of Saigon today during a 48 hour ceasefire the Viet Cong had proclaimed in honor of Buddha's birthday.

The Viet Cong ceasefire began at 7 a.m. Southern allied forces were to start a 24-hour truce period at 6 a.m. Friday. Meanwhile, more than 50 southern allied operations of battalion size or larger continued without letup.

At least 50 Viet Cong were reported killed in the action northwest of Saigon. Initial reports said one American was killed and seven wounded.

"They were congregating in there for their stand-down period," said a U.S. military spokesman. "We had intelligence information they were going to be in there for a meeting to plan actions for summer campaign next month. We were not standing down."

It was a sparsely settled farm area of scattered houses, rice paddies and bamboo hedgerows. Military spokesmen said an American plane with a loudspeaker flew over, urging the Viet Cong to surrender and calling on the rest of the people to move out.

The spokesmen said about 200 women and children moved out, but the Viet Cong started shooting with machine-guns and rocket grenades.

TRUDEAU: Think Regional, One Canada Just a Slogan

This is the final article by political analyst Peter Regenstreif on Prime Minister Trudeau after one year in office. Today's survey covers how optimistic the country is about the future and over economic matters.

By PETER REGENSTREIF

Voters are almost evenly divided between being more optimistic or less about the future of their country after a year with Pierre Trudeau as their prime minister according to a national survey.

They are also split over their own economic situation and prospects.

Regionally, the patterns are related. Those areas that are optimistic about personal economic prospects tend to be optimistic about the nation's political future. The pessimists about personal finances are political pessimists.

747 Interviewed

These findings emerge from a survey of 747 voters interviewed in their homes. The survey began on April 20 — exactly one year to the day that Trudeau succeeded Lester Pearson as prime minister.

Voters were asked about the job Trudeau was doing, how they would vote in a federal election, the issues they considered important and their preferences among the party leaders for prime minister.

They were also asked whether they were more optimistic or less about the future of Canada "now that Pierre Trudeau has been prime minister for a year."

While 26 per cent replied they were more optimistic, another 23 per cent claimed they were less optimistic with 52 per cent stating that their feelings had not changed over the year.

Optimistic

The Prairies is the most pessimistic region: only 18 per cent are more optimistic while 33 per cent are less optimistic.

In all other areas, the optimistics outnumber the pessimists. Ontario is the most optimistic province followed by British Columbia.

LABOR BOARD URGED TO SETTLE DISPUTES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Liberal leader Pat McGeer today suggested the formation of a board of labor development to take the heat out of British Columbia's tense labor situation.

Mr. McGeer said the board, which would be set up by a Liberal government under an independent economic council, would recommend guidelines and then suggest settlements before disputes reached the strike or lockout stage.

He said it would look at the company's competitive position, the increase in the cost of living, comparable wages in Canada and the United States, the whole economic picture and relate these to both the company's and the union's proposals.

Mr. McGeer said the board, which would have labor economists, management economists and an impartial chairman, would eliminate the brinkmanship of last-minute negotiations and ensure a fair deal for everybody.

. . . OTTAWA

Conservative Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants) said the government bill has many commendable features but does not solve the problems of half the people of Canada at the low end of the income scale.

He also regretted that the bill had not set up a full department of housing and urban affairs to deal with problems of the growing "megalopolis" along the St. Lawrence and Great Lakes.

John Gilbert (NDP-Toronto Broadview) said the removal of the ceiling of NHA interest rates is a capitulation to financial institutions which had played cat-and-mouse with the government by holding back from investments in housing.

On this point, Mr. Andras said earlier that he intends to hold discussions with approved lenders soon, but that preliminary indications on the flow of private mortgage funds are encouraging.

DERIDES NHA EXTENSION

Mr. Gilbert also derided the extension of NHA mortgages to a maximum life of 40 rather than 25 years. He said it was not much of a gift for a young couple who bought at the age of 30 and were 70 before the mortgage was paid off.

Provision for renegotiating interest rates after five years also was a concession to the lending institutions, allowing them to "screw the financial vise that much tighter."

. . . TAKEOVER

million shares. Canbrew directors, some favoring the offer, made no recommendation to shareholders.

Rothman's directors urged the Philip Morris offer be turned down.

Today Philip Morris raised its offer to $15, which it was felt should clinch the takeover as Canbrew shares were only $11.75 on stock exchanges this morning.

Pitfield said that while he felt the $12 offer was "very fair," the $15 bid was "phenomenal." He would be "very surprised" if the takeover did not succeed, he said.

Last year Rothman's bought control in Canbrew when it obtained the stock held by E. P. Taylor's Argus Corp. This was raised to 11.7 per cent with the purchase last month of 57,995 additional shares on the market.

The Ontario Securities Commission reported Wednesday that Taylor also sold in April 26,800 shares he held through Windfield's Farms Ltd.

Walkathon To Aid Camp

An 11-mile walkathon will be organized by St. Aidan's Church, 3705 Richmond Road, Saturday June 7.

Proceeds will go to the George Pringle United Church Camp at Shawnigan Lake and to the church's organ fund.

"Competitors of all ages will be welcome," says the minister, Rev. Alastair MacLeod, "and there will be separate categories.

"Older persons will not be asked to complete the 11-mile course."

Community Action Founders Meet

The Community Action Group will hold a founding constitutional convention on Monday, June 9, and Monday, June 16, at 8 p.m. in Blanshard Elementary School.

The group's main objective is to gather supporters who will help people in the low-income bracket.

On both evenings discussion groups will study objectives, membership, number of table officers necessary, and other necessary planning details.

Further information may be obtained from Mrs. R. P. Talbot at 479-5133 or Mrs. Peggy Alexander, 386-0144.

Cadet Cruise Joins Party In San Diego

Two Esquimalt-based navy destroyer-escorts leave Friday for a 35-day cruise to San Diego, Hawaii and San Francisco.

HMCS Columbia and HMCS Chaudiere will dock in San Diego next week to spend five days helping that city celebrate its 200th anniversary.

The ships will later spend five days in Pearl Harbor and another five days in San Francisco, and are scheduled to return July 5.

Extra men on the ships for the training cruise will include 26 sea cadets selected from across Canada, and 26 officer cadets. The cruise is primarily for the benefit of the officer cadets who are due to become full-ranking officers in the near future.

The crew of of the Chaudiere is now making a huge maple leaf in preparation for the San Diego festivities. When the ship docks the giant symbol will be mounted with lights on the stack.

The Canadians will also present a highly decorative bathtub (courtesy of Nanaimo mayor Frank Ney) to senior American naval officers.

Broadcasters Make Peace With Cable TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Association of Broadcasters announced today a proposed agreement to end the 20 years of dissension between American broadcasters and cable television systems.

Vincent T. Wasilewski, president of NAB, said representatives of each industry hammered out the proposals, which still must be considered by the two industries.

Some points would have to be incorporated into the laws and into the regulations of the Federal Communications Commission.

The agreement, reported by Wasilewski in an address prepared for the Federal Communications Bar Association, includes proposals that:

1. CATV (Community antenna television) systems be liable as determined by Congress for payment of copyright fees on TV programs they retransmit to their transacribers.

2. CATV systems be permitted to originate sponsored programs on a single channel.

3. Interconnection on CATV systems to distribute mass-appeal programming be prohibited.

Sooke Seeks B.C. Grant On Swim Meet

The Sooke school district hopes to sponsor an island-wide swimming competition among schools next year with the aid of a provincial government sports grant.

District superintendent Ernest Hyndman said today a school board-appointed committee, mainly of swimming staff, has recommended the project. The school board has until June 23 to apply for a $2,000 grant from the provincial government's recently-established sports fund.

Details of the form any swim meet might take have yet to be settled but it could be held in Colwood's Centennial pool, said Hyndman.

NAME CONTEST

In business before the school board meeting Tuesday night, trustees approved holding a contest to name a school nearing completion on Rocky Point Road.

The school will serve initially as an annex for Metchosin school and will have an enrolment of 45 in Grades 1 to 4 in September under Metchosin school principal C. E. J. Gould.

Area residents had earlier suggested the new school be named after pioneer resident Hans Helgesen but trustees balked, apparently feeling there were a number of other pioneer residents' names which should ge included for consideration.

Arrangements for the school-naming contest are in the hands of Gould.

Trustees also agreed to a meeting with students at Edward Milne high school in Sooke in the near future. The students requested the meeting to discuss smoking regulations, "the punishment system," and the possibility of having their school open at night.

Supermarkets to Close on Mainland

VANCOUVER (CP) — The six major supermarket companies in greater Vancouver Wednesday served 72-hour lockout notice on 3,000 grocery clerks as a meatcutters' strike-lockout completed its third day.

The notice was served on the Retail Food and Drug Clerks Union after employers said the clerks were working with meatcutters by refusing to cross the butchers' picket lines.

The lockout could take effect Saturday afternoon, but stores are expected to remain open until their normal 6 p.m. closing time.

Shelves then would be cleared of stock and the stores shut down for the duration of the work stoppage.

Supermarkets generally were without fresh produce, meat and milk Wednesday. About 800 meatcutters were locked out Saturday after threatening to strike the major supermarkets in a wage dispute.

A spokesman for the stores said negotiations with the clerks' union had been delayed and that the clerks were working on strategy with the meatcutters. Both unions denied this.

More than 100 supermarkets are involved—Safeway, Super-Valu, High-Low, Lodom Foods, Food Fair and Shop-Easy.

Three of these, Safeway, Shop-Easy and Super-Valu, operate 14 supermarkets in Greater Victoria. But as with the meatcutters' strike, the impending lockout of the clerks in Greater Vancouver will not affect Victoria stores, at least initially.

"As long as they (the unions) don't take any action in Victoria, we won't," a spokesman for the food store chains said from Vancouver this morning.

PLANS CAMPAIGN

Meanwhile the British Columbia Federation of Labor plans a limited "hot product" campaign in the wake of three B.C. Supreme Court injunctions against striking oil workers.

The federation approved its strategy in support of the oil workers after several days of meetings but said it would not release details until later today.

The edict would ask other unions not handle products coming out of the refineries, although the federation is not expected to ask for an over-all boycott.

The injunctions were granted to Gulf Canada Ltd., Standard Oil Co. of B.C. and Imperial Oil Ltd. and allow only peaceful picketing.

A Gulf spokesman said the injunction alleviated fears that the company's 135 service stations in the Vancouver area would be out of gasoline by Sunday.

He said the company has adequate stock on hand and trucks will now be able to pass through lines set up by the 550 striking members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union.

Also affected are the Shell Canada Ltd. refinery in suburban Burnaby and Home Oil and Texaco distributing centres.

Imperial officials told the court pickets had been spraying truck windshields with black paint and tried to damage trucks with lumber as well as spraying noxious and poisonous fumes in ventilation intakes of some trucks.

Westland Carriers Ltd. lost a bid for an injunction to stop the Teamsters union from ordering Westland drivers not to transport "hot" oil to major consumers, including Vancouver International Airport.

When the oil strike began, Westland set up a system under which supervisors drove trucks out of the struck refineries to their own Burnaby terminal and then turned them over to the regular, unionized drivers for delivery.

They had asked for the injunction when two drivers refused to drive trucks at all.

BENNETT WON'T INTERVENE

Premier Bennett today indicated he does not plan on intervening in any of the current labor disputes in B.C.

"This is a free economy," he told reporters.

"People have a right to withdraw their labor."

He said the compulsory arbitration powers of the new mediation commission act would be used "only in emergencies."

He was asked if any of the disputes, such as the oil refinery and meat cutter strikes and lockouts, fell within the category of an emergency.

"The answer is no," he replied.

A ridge of high pressure building west of the latter system will cause a clearing trend in most coastal areas Friday afternoon and in the southern interior by evening. Temperatures will remain cool.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

The weather has been getting warmer every year for about 75 years. The reason is traced to the weather cycle we are in.

Just before the Civil War, all the areas of the world experienced the lowest temperatures recorded in the previous 1,000 years. The cycle of weather, dropping from very hot in the ninth century to very cold in the 19th century, was ending. Everything about the weather from about 1865-85 on was getting warmer as a new cycle got under way.

The rise in temperatures is nothing to worry about, says the weather scientists. For warmer weather to endanger our health and safety, the average temperatures would have to go up more than they do. A rise of nine or 10 degrees would roast the people who live in the tropics and make a tropical region out of North America. That isn't likely to occur, however.

MAN ON THE MOON? Craters, as viewed from 2,700 miles the lunar surface, create a "face" with the "eyes" being formed from the Sea of Cold, left, and Sea of Crises and the "nose and mouth" from the Sea of Tranquility, site of the primary landing site for Apollo 11 sometime in July. Apollo 10 astronauts, who ended their mission to the moon earlier this week, also produced these other pictures of the moon's surface. Top left, a view across landing site 3 in the Central Bay. The site is in the middle and the crater at the bottom is about 3.7 miles in diameter. Bottom left, is a close-up of a deep crater. Picture was taken when astronauts Tom Stafford and Gene Cernan were 9 miles from the lunar surface. The crater and its location were not identified when this photo was released today by U.S. space officials. ((AP Wirephotos).

Saigon Draws U.S. Backing

PARIS (AP) — The United States told the North Vietnam and the Viet Cong today that a political settlement of the Vietnam problem is impossible "without the full participation and agreement of the legitimate, duly elected Saigon government."

Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge declared that efforts to exclude the South Vietnamese government from political negotiations "only delays peace and prolongs the war."

Lodge spoke at the 19th full-scale session of the Paris peace talks after North Vietnam and the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front had repeated their demands for a Saigon peace cabinet to be followed by a provisional coalition government. Both assailed the government of President Nguyen Van Thieu.

There was no sign of progress in the talks, as the negotiators stood firm on the main issues of troop withdrawals and terms of a political settlement. The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong also returned to their attack on the Nixon administration, accusing it of intensifying the war and of trying to perpetuate the division of Vietnam.

North Vietnam's deputy negotiator, Ha Van Lau, said Lodge had been trying to deceive the public by claiming there were points of similarity between the peace plans put forward by President Nixon and the National Liberation Front.

The two formulas are "fundamentally different," Lau said. He described as "ridiculous and absurd" the U.S. demand for a mutual withdrawal of outside military forces from South Vietnam.

Both Lau and NLF representative Tran Buu Kiem laid heavy stress on anti-war sentiment in the United States, a theme they had emphasized before the two revised peace plans were submitted earlier this month.

Lodge's firm insistence that the other side would have to negotiate with the present Saigon government apparently was intended to ease the growing concern among South Vietnamese officials that the United States might be leaning toward some sort of compromise.

GAGLARDI WILL RUN

Minister without portfolio Phil Gaglardi, who raised the question of whether or not he would seek re-election two weeks ago, has ended his own suspense.

He will seek the Kamloops Social Credit nomination again Saturday, Gaglardi said this morning.

He announced he could not refuse the "many different individuals" including Premier Bennett who had begged him to run.

Island Loggers Again Walk Out

KELSEY BAY (CP) — About 300 loggers and truck drivers walked off the job Wednesday only one day after returning to work at a MacMillan Bloedel operation at Sayward, just south of here.

The men, members of Local 1-363 of he International Woodworkers of America, resumed work Tuesday after a meeting was arranged between union and company officials to discuss grievances.

A spokesman said the company proposed that the dispute be settled by arbitration, but refused to agree to one demand — that of increased bonus time. This forced another 115 men to stop work — but 200 others continued on the job.

Wednesday, about 300 men were off the job and another 25 were working.

General and Specific

AN IMPORTANT FACET OF the problem of inflation control in Canada was brought out in the White Paper tabled in Parliament this week by Finance Minister Benson. In a land so widespread and diversified as Canada the economic and financial problems vary from region to region even though politically the country forms a national unit. Geography is a powerful component of the economic picture, hence at any one time there might be evidence of recession in the Maritimes, a highly inflationary speed-up in Ontario, sluggishness on the Prairies and a boom accompanied by relatively high unemployment on the Pacific Coast.

Since federal economic remedies and anti-inflation measures are applied on a national basis, the difficulty of fitting into regional or local needs a policy designed for half a continent becomes evident. Clearly something more than an over-all approach must be made if the peculiar problems of prescribing remedies a mari usque ad mare are to be solved.

As Mr. Benson puts it: "These differences add to the problems of policy for stabilization and growth, and underline the need to develop supplements to the more traditional economic instruments, directed at the restraint of excess pressures in areas where they develop while encouraging continued advance wherever there are unused resources . . ."

Thus, while the orthodox policies of nationally imposed monetary and fiscal control must be continued, we may expect—if Mr. Benson follows through on his hint—that some new departures in anti-inflation measures and economic stimulation may be seen on a regional basis. This apparently would go farther than the existing federal equalization grants which are designed to assist lagging regional economies.

But effective implementation would demand of the Canadian public a better understanding of economic problems and a wider concept of nationhood than is frequently exhibited. For instance, to curb a too-hot economy in one part of the country, federal spending there might be cut to a bare minimum, while it was being temporarily stepped up in another area which needed the stimulation of an influx of capital. In view of the outcries which greet, for instance, an uneven geographical allotment of federal ship-building contracts, a good deal of public education will have to be carried out by the national government in order to get support for a regionally implemented policy. Another avenue of approach could be through the provincial governments in imposing checks and balances with specific regional applications.

But whatever means are used, both national and regional recognition must be given to the steady inroads of inflation. The price level rose by 3.6 per cent last year—a direct erosion of savings, pensions and all fixed incomes. The index has risen by 1.9 per cent in the first four months of this year alone and could far exceed 1968's alarming increase before the year's end. The longer the trend continues, the more drastic the remedy will have to be.

Caught in the Cloth

IN THE PRESSURES OF AN election candidates are prone to make promises that come back to haunt them if their campaigns are successful. Such is the case of President Nixon, who is faced by a serious split in his administration on the issue of free trade as a result of some remarks he made last summer.

In a bid to win the support of the textile industry and the votes of those dependent upon it, Mr. Nixon promised to take steps that would stem the flow of cloth imports—this despite the fact that as a signatory of the Geneva Agreement the United States is committed to a course away from protectionism and toward freer world trade. Mr. Nixon said he would "extend the concept" of a special international agreement on cotton textiles to "all other textile articles involving wool, man-made fibres and blends."

But first he decided to see whether exporters such as Japan, Hong Kong, South Korea and Taiwan would agree to impose voluntary restrictions on themselves. The president's new Commerce Secretary, Mr. Maurice Stans, had barely moved into his office before taking off for Asia, where he was met by polite but firm rebuffs. So Mr. Stans got tough. He warned the exporters that if they did not start cooperating within three months Congress would be asked to pass restrictive quota legislation.

Mr. Stans may not be able to carry out his threat, however. Opposition to his position is hardening within the Administration, particularly in the State Department which is concerned about the effect on world opinion of a reversal of U.S. trade policy. It is not certain either that Congress would go along, despite the existence of a powerful protectionist lobby.

In any case, the problem now rests in Mr. Nixon's lap. If the President should decide to carry through with his campaign remarks and back Mr. Stans, he will raise serious concern among friends and trading partners of the United States about the future course of his government's trade policy. It would be unfortunate if the spirit of the Geneva pact, supported so conscientiously by Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, should be undone.

Glaringly White

LAST MONTH, WHEN ANALysts assessed the sweeping triumph of City Councilman Thomas Bradley over Sam Yorty in the Los Angeles primary, the statement was made that only one factor could stop the councilman from becoming the city's first Negro chief magistrate. Los Angeles, said observers, was not ready for a black mayor.

Since that analysis, and during a bitterly contested campaign for this week's run-off election, Councilman Bradley appeared to be gaining. The appearances were deceiving. Los Angeles, in its heaviest turnout of voters for a mayoralty election, seems to have justified the strength of the predicted vote against color. Mayor Yorty has been returned.

The significance of the decision will be recognized far from Los Angeles. Despite the efforts made since the Watts riots, majority sentiment is running substantially against the Negro, at least for top civic office in California's biggest city. Interest was high enough to bring 85 per cent of the qualified voters to the polls. The outcome might have been less disturbing had racism not been firmly stamped as the element which would be decisive—a point emphasized by the rejection of the board of education's Negro president in a simultaneous election.

REJECTING A COMPROMISE

By JAMES RESTON

Risk in Trying to Humiliate the U.S.

THE astonishing thing about the Vietnam War now is that the enemy does not accept President Nixon's peace terms. It is true that Hanoi feels it was cheated twice at the peace table — at the end of the last World War and at Geneva in 1954 — but Mr. Nixon has now put forward a compromise formula which not only gives Hanoi a chance to get rid of the Americans, but to take over the country by legitimate political means.

Reston

President Nixon has said he is not fighting now for a military victory, for military bases, for any military ties with Vietnam in the future, or even for a democratic form of government in that peninsula. He wants "all political elements" to participate in free elections, including the Communists, and will accept "any government in South Vietnam that results from the free choice of the South Vietnamese people themselves."

If Fighting Stopped

Consider the position of the North Vietnamese and the Vietcong on the one hand, and of the South Vietnamese government and the United States government on the other if the fighting were reduced and finally stopped on this basis.

Ho Chi Minh in Hanoi would be the symbol of national liberation, the man who expelled the French after Dienbienphu, and fought the Americans to a compromise ceasefire. President Thieu of South Vietnam, on the other hand, would be in command of a divided government in Saigon and of powerful instruments of war, but on the point of losing the American military and political leadership and American troops.

More than that, if the elections in the South were to be a free and genuine expression of the will of the South Vietnamese people, which is what President Nixon says is the really important thing, they would have to be run, not by the Saigon regime, but either by some international body or by a new coalition government in Saigon representing all the contending elements of South Vietnamese politics, including the Communists.

Troubled by Nixon Offer

The Saigon government and many of the U.S. generals in Saigon and the Pentagon are obviously troubled by the Nixon offer. They see it precisely as the thing President Nixon says he opposes, namely, as "a disguised American defeat." They are not convinced that Saigon, even if it retains American arms, will be able to dominate the military or political scene for very long. Weapons become obsolete, and once the American troops leave, who would like to suggest to President Nixon that he send them back again.

Hanoi, however, is paranoid about the white man's West. It knows colonial Europe of the past. It knows nothing about America. It cannot quite believe that the United States would take 35,000 dead and spend $30 billion a year and then agree to go away. Yet this is the fact. The president wants out. He is risking everything, including the Communist control of the whole peninsula, everything except the humiliation of the United States.

Unfortunately, Hanoi is so ill-informed about America that it seems determined on a policy of humiliation and this is dangerous. For if Nixon rejects a strategy of military victory, and Hanoi insists on trying to win on the battlefield, this situation, in the present militant and repressive mood of America, could get out of hand.

It is clear even to critics who opposed Mr. Nixon's hawkish tendencies and political ambitions in the past that he is dead earnest about ending this war. It is significant that many of the anti-Vietnam forces that opposed him in the past are now supporting his peace efforts and many of his hawkish backers of the past are now alarmed by his concessions for peace.

But somehow the enemy has missed the point. Maybe it is merely that there is a struggle going on there between the Peking and Moscow Communists, which we in this country do not understand. But one thing is fairly clear: the Nixon administration is prepared to get out on terms that do not humiliate Hanoi, while Hanoi is insisting on terms which, if accepted, would humiliate the United States.

Counting the Dead

This is a dangerous situation. While the diplomats argue over tactics, the soldiers on both sides press the battle. In the week of May 11-18, 430 Americans were killed in Vietnam, but this clearly cannot go on. One day, instead of printing the mathematics of the dead somebody is going to fill the page with the names and faces of the men who lost their lives while the politicians argued and debated, and then the problem of negotiating peace could easily get out of hand.

It is not beyond control now. It need not get out of hand. But it could easily do so. President Nixon has not brought his generals in Vietnam into line with his peace negotiators in Paris, but he is offering the enemy not only an honorable compromise but a good chance to achieve their political objectives, and the amazing thing is that they seem to be rejecting his accommodation, and insisting on his humiliation, which is the one and probably the only thing he will not accept.

New Terms for a Quebec Federal Park

QUEBEC, after all these years, is to have a national park; a small but picturesque area tucked away in the Forillon peninsula of Gaspe. Owing to the sensitivities of the Union Nationale government, it will be not quite like the others. Mr. Chretien's announcement has been generally welcomed and has encouraged hopes of further and larger developments to come. There is, however, an undercurrent of concern about the terms of the agreement since Mr. Stanfield is obviously right in discerning a change from the policy reaffirmed last year by the minister then responsible, Mr. Arthur Laing.

Western

This was simply that land to be dedicated to national park purposes must be turned over by the province to the federal authority, without encumbrance and in perpetuity.

Flexible Policy

According to the new minister, the policy with regard to parks is flexible. Thus Ottawa has accepted in this case a 99-year lease with the reservation that Quebec may, if it chooses, redeem the land at the end of 60 years on repayment of all capital expenditures incurred by the federal government. Flexibility invites a risk that Mr. Laing's policy avoided; the danger that other governments may seize on these unique provisions and demand concessions of like character, thus weakening the national system.

The federal government accepted these terms, presumably, because rejection would not merely have doomed Forillon (at least for the present) but also the ambitious hopes of Mr. Chretien for a group of national parks in Quebec wilderness areas. In addition, the breakthrough in Quebec may stimulate public demand for public parks in other provinces. It seems almost bound to have an impact on people in Ontario — in many ways our most advanced province but the most retarded from a national parks standpoint. Although there are some fine provincial parks in Ontario, the best now threatened by lumbering interests, only 998 acres have been deeded to the nation.

Questionable Option

It may be found that the risks of Mr. Chretien's policy are more theoretical than real. Long before 60 years have passed, the value of Forillon Park (even in dollar terms) should be so clear to Quebecers that the option will be of no interest to any government in its right mind. For evidently there is no escape from intensifying urbanization and spreading development with people turning ever more desperately to such areas of wilderness as may be preserved.

Mr. Laing hoped to supplement the parks system with recreation areas set aside under less stringent conditions. One hopes that this idea has not been forgotten amid the enchantments of the new flexibility.

The other provinces, in their own best interests, would be well advised to ignore the Forillon precedent. They have, especially in Western Canada, a national parks investment that is paying off far more handsomely than any probable mining or lumbering venture. It ought to be their interest to press with urgency for more parks since it is becoming ever more plain that in this matter we are in a losing race with time. The last thing needed in Western Canada is a Quebec-like sensitivity about the terms of dedication.

On one point Mr. Chretien should be very cautious. Flexibility, which may be justified in the special conditions of the Forillon case, should be limited strictly to the conditions of transfer. The broad statement that "policy with regard to our national parks is flexible" is open to so many interpretations as to be unacceptable. Mr. Laing was not flexible and, not unnaturally, offended some people. But he found broad public support and no minister of the former government was more respected in Western Canada.

Passing Phase

Periods of loud unanimity, when all classes of society, suddenly reunited, outbid each other in shrill protestations of orthodoxy, seldom last long. They cannot. Society is not constructed like that. The very shrillness conceals an inner uncertainty.

—Hugh Trevor-Roper, Regius Professor of Modern History, Oxford University.

A Hard Look At U.S. Profs

The Globe and Mail

THE Americans are coming. Indeed, they are arriving in such numbers that an emergency symposium of Canadian professors has set up a seven-man committee to study, and eventually resist, the Americanization of our universities.

A few months ago, a preliminary survey by two Carleton University teachers alerted the general public to this phenomenon. The figures they produced, extrapolated with rough accuracy from 15 college calendars, suggested that less than half the faculty members in Canada were probably Canadian, while in 1961 the proportion had been 75 per cent.

At the time, many Canadians dismissed this research as alarmist. Even on campuses, not a few academics found arguments to prove its intent illiberal.

Now the symposium of Quebec and Ontario representatives has decided to launch a more complete and up-to-date national study on the basis of a truly shocking figure offered by the federal Department of Manpower and Immigration: in the past academic year, Canadians were hired to fill only 14 per cent of open university teaching jobs in this country.

Whatever the explanations and qualifiers behind this figure, few rational Canadians can accept it with serenity. Even less reassuring is the very high rate of hiring from one country: the United States alone supplied 1,013 of the new professors, while the United Kingdom sent 545 and all other countries 722.

Against this inflow, the influence of the lucky 362 Canadian candidates would not seem decisive in turning back the tide of our society's intellectual annexation to the United States. Especially if, as many suspect, American professors are moving most heavily into the social science faculties which directly shape students' awareness of their country and its people.

Still, it would be invidious and premature to organize immediately the moral equivalent of a Paul Revere ride against our American guests. First, their alleged takeover of our schools of higher learning must be weighted against the special contributions they alone, perhaps, can make: it is precisely in certain social sciences that American universities have established world superiority. Their methodology and comparative experiences bring precious illuminations.

Second, any definitive judgment on this issue must await more detailed investigation of the factors behind the figures. Before crying disaster we must find answers to a number of questions.

Is the trend permanent of part of a short-term lack of Canadian candidates or a temporary emigration from the Viernam war and racial violence? Why do so many Canadian Ph. Ds move after graduation to teach in the United States? Are government and industry or other professions in Canada drawing off too many graduates from teaching? What role, if any, is played by tax concessions made American and Canadian scholars when they teach in each others' countries? Is there really an attempt by well-placed Americans here to recruit back home through the old-boy network, or is this inevitable in the absence of a better organized "slave market" in Canada for matching jobs and talents?

These and probably many other questions must be met with facts. And facts are exactly what the symposium's committee plans to find in travelling across Canada. Its members can do Canada a very great service by digging into the figures with the courage and open-mindedness they have already shown.

To the Editor

The Litter Piles Up

Hearty congratulations on your excellent editorial saying that we do indeed need mandatory refunds on beverage containers.

Mr. Kiernan takes refuge in saying that people should not litter, therefore we should need to offer them a better inducement not to do so. We could as well say that people should not steal so why lock doors? Hard litter is increasing under the present container setup and will continue to do so, as Mr. Kiernan must well know. His stated reasons for taking no action are mere excuses for avoiding action against commercial interests.—Elton A. Anderson, vice-president, Outdoors Unlittered.

Looking Back

From the Times, May 29, 1909.

It is expected that the B.C. Telephone Co. will install a local system throughout Gordon Head, Royal Oak and Strawberry Vale in view of the rapid growth taking place in the three districts. The matter is presently being discussed between company and Saanich officials.

In Gordon Head, seven new residences are in the course of construction and several others are expected to be built in the Strawberry Vale district.

Sorry, But You Just Don't Fit Into Our Plan

By ED MAZE
SWEDEN NOW

Sweden, as we all know, enjoys an international reputation for its town and country planning.

There are city plans, site plans, regional plans and master plans, as well as apartment house plans, shopping centre plans, recreational area plans and plans for further planning.

In several planned communities there are even specially-planned areas for man's best friend, with planned trees, against which dogs may relieve themselves.

Plans, plans, plans and more plans. No urban sprawl in Sweden, such as one finds in America. Indeed not!

●

When there is such thorough planning there must also be rules, regulations and mountains of restrictions. There are restrictions on what, when, where and how one can build.

And when the community owns the land on which your house is built, as is sometimes the case, you must get permission even to cut a branch or two off the tree in your backyard.

So it naturally follows that the people responsible for town planning in Sweden wield an awesome amount of power.

I first began to have my doubts about town and country planning in Sweden when I learned that virtually none of the architects who drew up the plans for the new suburban communities lived in them.

●

Instead, they invariably set up housekeeping in the preciously few unplanned older communities that have managed to survive the onslaught of their brilliant redevelopment plans.

Now I happen to own a summer house in one of these unplanned areas in the environs of Stockholm.

Not having benefitted from careful planning this underprivileged community must make do with picturesque dirt roads winding up and down hills, a disorderly array of trees and an abundance of bird and other wildlife, and perfectly charming houses, no two of which are alike.

Many members of this community, myself included, would like to live here all year round if they were permitted to enlarge their houses.

This is strictly forbidden, however, and has been for about two decades.

Nothing can be done until the regional plan, which seems to change as frequently as the weather, is finalized.

This problem is discussed and debated, with monotonous regularity, at the yearly meetings of the local landowners' association, of which I am a member.

●

Leading architects and city planners are invited to talk at these meetings, and they always bring along a pile of blueprints and maps showing different areas marked for different development purposes.

As for our area, the answer, year after year, is always the same: nothing definite has been decided yet.

At one of these meetings a young man in the audience started everyone by challenging the architect.

When would a decision be made, he wanted to know. The architect couldn't say.

●

The young man persisted: would it be in ten, twenty or thirty years? It was hard to tell, the architect replied.

Will it be before I die of old age? the young man asked. Everyone, including the architect, laughed at this remark. But he got no answer.

I felt I had had enough of these futile meetings, and I decided to take direct action.

I phoned an architect at the town planning commission and told him I wanted to add a room to my summer house so I could live there all year round. It's too small now, I emphasized.

Much to my amazement (I had expected a simple "no") he told me to come around to his office where we could discuss the matter.

This seemed very encouraging. Maybe these people are human after all, I thought.

"Are you an American?" the architect asked after we shook hands.

"Yes," I said.

"Well, we do things differently in Sweden," he said. "We are firm believers in city planning."

"Yes, I know," I said. "About this room I want to add . . ."

●

"We try to avoid what you in America call the urban sprawl," he went on. "That's why we must plan very carefully."

And then, before I could stop him, the architect took out a pile of those same blueprints amd maps that I had seen at the meetings. He spent the next hour explaining how the regional plan worked.

The only thing I didn't find out was whether or not I could add a room to my summer house. When I finally managed to bring up what I'd come for he informed me that there was no final plan for the area in which I had my summer house.

●

"Why must there be a plan?" I asked. "I like the community very much the way it is now. All I need is that extra room."

"That area is not suitable for year-round living," he said.

"Why not?" I asked.

"Well, for one thing, the roads are not adequate," he said.

"That doesn't bother me," I said. "I don't have a car."

"There are no schools in that area," he said.

"I don't have any children," I said. "Only a cat."

"The community doesn't have a shopping centre," he said.

"No problem," I said. "The nearest one is about a mile away . . . less than a five-minute bicycle ride."

"There's no city water," he said.

"I can dig a well," I said. "Most of the other people have already done that."

The architect went on and on, finding more and more reasons why this unplanned community where I had my summer house was scarcely fit for human habitation.

Regretfully, he had to refuse permission for adding that extra room.

I finally realized that the architect had only my interests at heart, that what he did was for my own good.

●

So I thanked him for his great concern about the schools for the children I did not have, the roads for the car I did not own, the city water I did not need and especially the question of the shopping centre.

It is, of course, absurd to have to bicycle for almost five minutes to buy your groceries.

Natives Are Restless In the Back Benches

By ANTHONY WESTELL

"Come work with me" invited the orange-and-black Trudeau campaign posters a year ago.

Among those who responded wholeheartedly to this appeal to involvement were the highly educated and motivated Liberals who left comfortable professions and profitable businesses to enter Parliament and work with the exciting new Prime Minister.

Westell

Now some of them are wondering just what work they are supposed to do, and are questioning in the philosophical way whether, in fact, there is a meaningful role for government backbenchers in the age of participatory democracy.

They are not badly disillusioned as yet because they still hope to work out solutions to their frustrations, with the co-operation of Pierre Elliott Trudeau, who is almost as new to Parliament as they are and just as dissatisfied with the relationship between cabinet and private member.

But in this class of '68—probably on average the best class of MPs ever elected—there are already a few saying privately that unless the situation changes to permit them to do a worthwile job, they will not be back in the next election.

They complain that the present system forces them to be silent tools of the government, with no real opportunity to influence policy or modify legislation. They say they are under-consulted on important matters, over-worked on trivial affairs and denied the basic services and facilities they need to do their job.

The often do not see government legislation until a few hours before it is published—far too late to suggest changes in private and without public embarassment to the minister in charge. The official languages bill, to cite one example, was shown to government supporters on the morning of the day it was presented to the Commons.

Liberal backbenchers are required nevertheless to give full and uncritical support to the bills in the House, and most accept this as an essential part of the parliamentary system. But many of them resent and reject the traditional view that this party discipline extends to committees of the house.

The system of committees for detailed exmination of legislation has been greatly expanded and many members are making serious efforts to become experts in their own fields in order to be able to contribute to the making of laws.

Pointless Exercise

But this is a pointless and frustrating exercise for Liberals if their only responsibility is to defend the government's proposals.

In addition, MPs have no security of tenure on the committees. They can be shifted from committee to committee at the whim of their party leaders—confirmed by a routine motion in the House.

The expanded system of committees has increased the workload on MPs, but most of them still lack adequate office facilities and secretarial assistance.

While Liberal backbenchers tend to be resentful of the fact Trudeau provided $200,000 in public funds for research to opposition parties, while ignoring his own supporters, what most MPs need more than research is an assistant to handle routine constituency problems while they concentrate upon matters of public policy.

Ministers Too Busy

The private meetings of the caucus of Liberal MPs and senators are the occasion for communication between the party leader and his parliamentary supporters, between ministers and backbenchers. This is the forum in which private members are supposed to be able to contribute to government policy and strategy.

But the backbenchers say ministers are usually too busy

BENSON
. . . soothing syrup

to consult effectively with them, and they hear about policies too late to prevent mistakes.

For example, some of the Toronto backbenchers spent part of their Christmas holidays consulting lawyers and other experts on the government's unpopular estate tax proposals, and returned to Ottawa armed with the soothing amendments which Finance Minister E. J. Benson later accepted.

Another complaint is that Trudeau has the last word at regular caucus meetings and often employs his debating skills to cut up his critics—inhibiting complaints and proposals at following meetings.

Trudeau, on the other hand, complains that backbenchers have not organized themselves to provide an effective in-put to cabinet decisions.

Complaint Sessions

Before he became prime minister, he used to say that caucus meetings were too often an occasion for whining and bickering. After winning the election last June and bringing members into the Commons on his coat-tails, he urged the new caucus to organize and discipline itself effectively.

There was some improvement for a time, but it is widely agreed that caucus meetings have again degenerated into complaint sessions.

This dissatisfaction on both sides explains the decision to hold a special weekend caucus June, 20-22, on "the role of the backbencher". One of the new Liberals, 48-year old Barnett Danson, a manufacturer of plastic-making machinery from York North, proposed the idea in a letter to the PM, and Trudeau enthusiastically accepted.

Revolt Sours for China Youth

By STANLEY KARNOW

HONG KONG — Even the most conservative American would be horrified if President Nixon ordered the national guard and labor vigilantes into U.S. colleges to beat or brainwash unruly students, or deport them to northern Alaska.

Yet this is almost exactly what is currently happening in China despite Peking's pretensions to running the world's only authentic Communist state.

Thus there is something ludicrous in the spectacle of radical American and European youths sporting Mao Tse-tung badges and spouting Mao's aphorisms while young Chinese are being repressed for similarly seeking their emancipation.

And there is something equally paradoxical in Peking's exhortations to "progressive" Western youths to trigger upheavals while their Chinese counterparts are being brutally subdued for displaying the mildest signs of independence.

★ ★ ★

For within the past year or more, the Red Guards and other activitsts initially unleashed in the Cultural Revolution have, with Mao's assent, been systematically crushed by a new Chinese bureaucracy composed of army officers and old Communist cadres.

Under the guise of making them true "proletarians," millions of youths have been shunted out of China's cities to bleak, backward villages, or forcibly recruited into military-style labor battalions in remote, arid frontier regions.

Those who have managed to remain in urban areas are being compelled to submit to controls by squads of soldiers and workers whose primary concern, like that of the Chicago police, is to maintain law and order.

In several places, effervescent young Chinese have been publicly executed for alleged "counter-revolutionary crimes." In south China last year, thousands of youths were killed by troops for the same rebellious activities they had been encouraged to pursue the year before.

★ ★ ★

Hence China's younger generation has discovered, to its vast disappointment, that the hopes and promises originally offered by Mao's utopian programs have been betrayed by harsh reality.

To appreciate the depth of their disenchantment, it is necessary to understand the tensions and pressures that have existed among Chinese youths ever since the Communists took over the country two decades ago.

As Mao himself has repeatedly stressed, the Communist victory in 1949 did not automatically turn China into a Marxist nirvana. On the contrary, Communist policies and practices led to serious class and regional differences in Chinese society.

For one thing, the rapid industrialization of China by the Communists in their first 10 years of rule sharpened the traditional contrasts between the cities and the countryside. As a consequence, neglected peasants grew to envy the relative comforts enjoyed by urban dwellers.

Under the Communists, too, there arose an establishment of party and government functionaries whose patronizing view of the masses resembled the haughty attitude of China's ancient mandarins towards the population.

These and other developments were reflected in Chinese schools and universities, where the sons and daughters of workers and peasants resented the privileged children of officials, who in turn resisted recurrent compaigns to homogenize them into the great unwashed "proletariat".

In addition, youths of all social backgrounds were frustrated by the shortage of career prospects in a structure dominated by veteran apparatchiks who clung to their jobs like limpets.

In 1965, as he plotted to uproot the party and state machinery he believed had doubled-crossed him, Mao recognized the explosive potential of China's pent-up younger generation. When he uncorked them, therefore, the Red Guards burst forth wildly in what was essentially an expression of unprecedented freedom.

★ ★ ★

Brimming with idealism, a girl Red Guard told a Europena writer visiting the south China city of Canton in early 1967 that the cultural revolution was a "feast of criticism."

Young Chinese, she explained, could now "write about things that have been forbidden for twenty years".

Where that girl is today is unknown.

But wherever she is, her "moment of truth" has surely been lost in a revolution that has, like other revolutions before it, consumed its most dedicated children.

CHILD DIVORCE?

Parents and children who are incompatible ought to get a divorce, in the opinion of Dr. Bruno Bettelheim, a leading child psychologist.

It would do them both good, says the University of Chicago professor.

"A hundred years ago, a child who didn't get along with mother was sent to live with auntie—perhaps for several years," says Bettelheim. "Both parent and child got a rest from each other."

★ ★ ★

But this practice is no longer acceptable. In this country the idea is firmly ingrained that all children should love their parents and all parents should love all of their children equally.

"It's too much to ask," says Bettelheim in an interview printed in Psychology Today. "The emotional demands children make on parents are practically impossible to meet."

A parent might be ideal for handling one child and be absolutely unfitted for dealing with another in the same family.

Today younger children are rarely supervised by an older sibling, and it is not unusual for children to stay at home until they are in their twenties. Incompatibility between parent and child is often the out growth of such conditions, and divorce is really the civilized solution, Bettelheim believes.

However, he may have overlooked one important point—who takes care of divorced kids? Will they be entitled to alimony? And will parents who divorce their children be able to claim them as dependents at income tax time?

Comb Jellies Unique in Nature

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL
Director, Provincial Museum

Comb jellies or "cat's eyes" are so much like jellyfishes that for a long time they were placed in this group and received no special attention. However, a closer look showed that they differed from jellyfishes in several ways, sufficiently so to justify placing them in a separate phylum called Ctenophora which means comb-bearer.

Carl

While a comb jelly has a transparent gelatinous body it is organized somewhat differently than that of a jellyfish. Usually it is more or less spherical instead of unbrella-shaped and is provided with a series of comb-like structures in eight equally spaced bands.

●

The combs beat the water with a wave-like motion to provide propulsion for the animal — a system entirely lacking in the jellyfish. These creatures also differ in having a more complex digestive system with numerous branched canals leading to all parts of the body, in having a balancing organ on the upper surface and in lacking stinging cells.

●

Our most common ctenophore, called cat's eye or sea gooseberry is a transparent blob about half an inch in diameter that takes a sharp eye to spot as it drifts by in the current. But if the light catches it at a favourable angle the rows of iridescent combs and two many-branched tentacles, each extending several inches behind the body become visible.

The tentacles are provided with batteries of sticky cells which adhere to any small creature that touches them. When contact is made the tentacle contracts drawing the victim up to the mouth through which it is swallowed.

Food includes larval stages of molluscs, crustaceans, plus the eggs and young of fishes or almost any small swimming or drifting animal. In turn they are eaten by a few larger animals possibly including salmon.

Another local species larger than the cat's eye but much less common is Beroe. It is vase-shaped, about an inch long and with a large mouth enabling it to swallow prey almost as big as itself. Despite its predatory nature Beroe has a delicate body which literally collapses when removed from water.

●

While most ctenophores are small some attain a surprisingly large size particularly in the tropics. Off the California coast one species rivals a small watermelon in size while elsewhere the Venus' girdle, a ribbon-like form, is sometimes three feet long. This latter species is pale violet in color and swims with a graceful undulating motion.

Most ctenophores are luminescent giving off a greenish light from areas beneath the comb plates. The ability to luminesce begins early in life, shortly after the egg begins to divide and it continues throughout life.

●

Ctenophores are hermaphroditic. Eggs and sperms are discharged into the sea through the mouth and the larvae develop directly into the adult form, not into an intermediate fixed stage as in some jellyfish.

In one Indo-Pacific species the eggs are attached to the under-surface until the young are free-swimming and in a Greenland form the eggs are retained in brood pouches during the early stages of development.

All in all, the comb jellies are a remarkable group of sea creatures, resembling jellyfishes in form and habit but in no way related to them. They are unique in the animal kingdom.

Falling off a horse is one thing. Falling with a horse is quite another. A steeplechase rider knows the hazards well, and still pushes his mount and himself to the utmost. The full shot. There is a whisky like that. A whisky that gives the full shot in taste and remarkably full flavour. Gold Stripe.
It will put 100% full, laughing taste in your mouth with every sip. And quietly leave. Without biting. If you want a little honest taste, maybe you should try Gold Stripe.

Water Ballet Charms Big Colwood Crowd

By MARJORIE PARKER

Mermaids of the Juan de Fuca Synchronized Swim Club frolicked, cavorted and performed a variety of water ballet routines to an overflow audience at Colwood Centennial Pool Wednesday night.

The girls in brilliant costumes demonstrated the results of long hours of practice in their almost flawless performance of intricate numbers.

The intermediate team, which placed first in the Vancouver Island championship and second in the British Columbia competition, presented a vigorous number called Mutiny. The swimmers were Bonnie Purvis, Nadean Zala, Jacquie Norbury, Diana McLean and Ila Smith.

Youngsters performing for the first time swam through Buttons and Bows. They were Donna Rhoades, Lisa McLeary, Michelle Sutherland, Chris Horne, Lore MacDonald.

The soloists were outstanding.

Vancouver Island senior champion Diana McLean swam The Japanese Princess with sylphlike ease.

A diving display by Debbie Grieg, a bit of hilarity from the clowns and Al Aylward and His Tots provided a nice balance to the program.

Choreographer and chief instructress was Mrs. Rita Norbury.

Papal Stand Impossible —Bishop

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Most Rev. James P. Shannon, the nation's best-known liberal Roman Catholic bishop, confirmed a report Wednesday that he has submitted his resignation an auxiliary bishop of St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Bishop Shannon said in a telephone interview his offer to quit followed an exchange of correspondence initiated by a hitherto secret letter the bishop wrote Pope Paul VI last September in which he confessed he could not accept the Pope's absolute ban on artificial birth control.

"In my pastoral experience I have found that this rigid teaching is simply impossible of observance by many faithful and generous spouses, and I cannot believe that God binds men to impossible standards," Bishop Shannon wrote the pontiff.

Extensive extracts of his letter were published by the Minneapolis Star Wednesday in a copyright story and subsequently confirmed by the bishop as words from his hand.

Civil Liberties Group Slams Eavesdropping

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament should outlaw all intentional electronic eavesdropping, except in "emergency circumstances," the Canadian Civil Liberties Association says.

In a brief presented Thursday to the standing committee on justice and legal affairs, the association says eavesdropping should be allowed only when there are "reasonable and probable grounds" for believing that:

—A crime will be committed against human life.

—An act of espionage will be committed on behalf of a foreign government.

"The eavesdropper has developed sufficient sophistication that he now is able to invade our most intimate activities," the brief says.

"The telephone, the parlor, the lavatory, the bedroom are no longer immune from these electronic peeping toms.

"But there is nothing in the law to protect the sanctity of private conversation."

The brief says the onus should be on the police to demonstrate "clearly and convincingly" the need for eavesdropping.

"Law enforcement authorities in Canada have not made the case for the kind of eavesdropping powers they wish. They have not demonstrated the existence of a clear and present danger from organized crime."

In cases where there is a need for eavesdropping, the association proposes that a public defender be appointed to challenge the Crown's submission before a judge for permission to use eavesdropping.

Maritime Exhibition Opens Tonight

Before the Magistrate

A man was found guilty in central court Wednesday of theft from a gas station last month but not of breaking and entering the building.

Robert J. Mason, 23, of no fixed address, was then sentenced to two years in jail for theft under $50, the maximum term allowed under the law.

Earlier Mason pleaded not guilty to the break-in and robbing of Belmont Service Centre, 1879 Old Island Highway. Court was told about $8 and some cigarettes were taken.

The magistrate said in his judgment the evidence on whether the premises had in fact been broken into was of such a nature it would be unsafe to find beyond a reasonable doubt it did occur.

However on the basis of several fingerprints belonging to the accused found on the cash register till, he said he was satisfied Mason had stolen the money and cigatettes.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said Mason's record included convictions for possession of stolen property, breaking and entering and escaping custody.

Michael D. Lemairte, 23, of 231 Helmcken was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary for indecent assault upon another male.

He was sentenced to a concurrent one-year term for contributing to juvenile delinquincy.

He pleaded guilty to both charges.

Court was told he received a two-year suspended sentence in 1968 for contributing. Macintyre said the circumstances were virtually indentical in each case.

David Roblin, 3691 Wascana, was fined $350 for impaired driving.

Lloyd S. Childers, 1068 Jenkins, and Henry Flett, 190 Oliver, were each fined $300 on the same charge.

'As Challenging as Oil Paintings'

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Paste and arrange pieces of fabric or wallpaper on a canvas or other surface and you have a collage.

"It may sound easy to create a picture with such materials but wait until you have tried it," said Victoria artist Nell Bradshaw, well known across Canada for her totem pole paintings.

"They are just as challenging to make as oil paintings," she said in an interview today. "It actually takes me longer to make a collage. It's exacting but stimulating."

She will exhibit her first collection of collages at the Village Gallery, Bastion Square, next week. A preview of her works will be held Sunday between 2 and 4 p.m.

The collages will perhaps startle admirers of her familiar paintings—moody, weather-beaten totem pole scenes—which some anthropologists claim are among the best painted in Canada.

But they won't be disappointed with her new works. They are superb, ranging from abstracts to religious subjects and made with rich fabrics and gold brocades.

They are the results of many long hours of work—a project started a year ago.

She hasn't abandoned painting old Indian village scenes, she explained, but has taken up collages for a change.

"It's a change of pace and challenging," she said. "I get so many ideas when I'm working on a collage that I have to jot them down on paper."

Mrs. Bradshaw said she was glad to see young people today appreciated this art form.

"Collages have been neglected for a long time," she said. "But more and more people are now taking an interest in this type of work.

At the exhibition, she will have several large collages on display. Two of these entitled "The Miracle" and "I Am The Vine" are excellent in design and composition.

Mrs. Bradshaw will be presenting a wide range of subjects. Some of these are semi-abstracts of cities. "Iridescent City" is one that is appealing.

City Flooded

WORCESTER, England (AP) —The worst floods in 35 years have hit the ancient city of Worcester, on the banks of the Severn River, after torrential rains. The county cricket ground was six feet under water Wednesday night and the racetrack resembled a lake with only the tops of the rails showing. Three roads in the city centre were submerged.

Respirator Helps Infants With Breathing

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Virginia Tech announced today development of a respirator for infants who have trouble breathing—an ailment that now takes the lives of about 25,000 babies yearly in the United States.

Tech spokesmen said physicians evaluating the performance of the highly sensitive respirator reported it has brought a significant reduction in infant mortality.

The respirator, developed by Dr. Leon J. Arp of the Virginia Tech faculty after one of his own infants fell ill, was said to have increased the survival rate of new-born babies afflicted with respiratory distress to 95 per cent from 50.

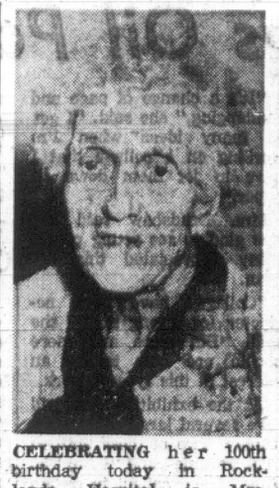
Of the infants who survive what physicians call the "respiratory distress syndrome," approximately half now suffer brain damage because of insufficient oxygen. The respirator also cuts into this toll, the school said.

PRODUCTION TO COME

Only developmental models of the respirator are available now. Commercial production is to start next year.

Several respirators are at Roanoke Memorial Hospital, where the equipment was first tested in February, 1967.

The superiority of the respirator, doctors said, lies in its sensitive and rapid response to the needs of the infant struggling for breath.



CELEBRATING her 100th birthday today in Rocklands Hospital is Mrs. Hannah Willcox, a resident of Victoria for 55 years. Mrs. Willcox's relatives were with her for a quiet party and she received a message of congratulations from the Queen. Her two daughters, Mrs. W. J. Boyd, of 241 Cook Street, and Mrs. B. Manning, of Hamhurstburg, Ontario, were present. Mrs. Willcox was born in Durham, England.

Death Toll High

KUALA LUMPUR (AP)—The Malaysian government today put the toll from the week of communal rioting early this month at 840 persons killed or missing. It said 5,480 persons were arrested, most of them Chinese. The highest death toll previously listed by the government had been 193, but reporters had reported it actually was far higher.

Home Rule for Scotland Backed at Church Session

EDINBURGH (AP) — The Church of Scotland ended a 10-day General Assembly Wednesday night during which it recommended home rule for Scotland but continued association with England and Wales in the United Kingdom.

The Queen attended five assembly sessions including the opening and closing ones. The first attendance by a monarch in more than 360 years, it was part of a campaign to identify the Royal Family more closely with Scotland's national aspirations.

In other major decisions the assembly:

—Condemned all forms of chemical and biological warfare and urged the government to initiate non-proliferation treaties concerning them in the United Nations.

—Dubbed as "disastrous" the new constitutional proposals of the Ian Smith government in Rhodesia "which would deny a majority of the people a full share in the government of their land."

—Instructed its moral welfare commission to look into the use of alcoholic wine at communion because of its possible effect on alcoholics attending communion services.

—Urged that divorce be granted on the sole ground of breakdown of marriage and asked the British government to reform the divorce law of Scotland accordingly.

—Gave the go-ahead to planning for a union of the two leading Presbyterian churches—the Church of Scotland and the United Free Church—with the Anglicans, Congregationalists, Methodists and Church of Christ. Observers felt that approval by the Church of Scotland removed a big hurdle but that objections still were likely from the Anglicans.

Council Is Middle Man for Arts Grants

By JOHN SLINGER

Tom Sherwood calls the Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria a "strange creature."

He's executive director of the two-year-old organization that, despite being a strange creature, is next thing to mother to 13 area groups of potters, weavers, singers and actors.

The council is a middle-man in the cultural grants business.

It protects Legislature Speaker William Murray from a numbing bombardment of requests for $75 and $100 slices from the B.C. Centennial Cultural Fund.

CULTURE CONVULSION

The fund, like the local council, was established in the great culture convulsion of 1967.

The fund passes out interest on an original $5 million perpetual fund that was doubled during during the last session of the legislature to $10 million. The interest amounts to about $750,000 annually.

Some of the more professionally-oriented, heavily-capitalized organizations go directly to Murray, who administers the funds, for cash.

For instance, the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria received $6,000 for the 1968-1969 period, Bastion Theatre received $8,500 and the Victoria Symphony Orchestra received $15,000.

NO BIG SUMS

But the small groups, the amateurs like the Country Church Players and the Victoria Hand Weavers Guild, don't need big sums. They merely need a little help finding a place to hang their flats and set up looms.

These people go to the local arts council that received $10,500 to divide.

Some 41 groups, including the symphony and Bastion Theatre, are members of the council and they determine whether the cause and need of the groups who appy to them for money are worthy.

Sherwood said that in an application, the group presents its budget, a program outline and must state specifically why it needs money and what it will be used for.

DEFRAYS ROYALTIES

The council does not pass out money for capital expenditures but in the instance of a theatre group, might help defray costs of heavy royalties on modern plays.

Nor does it provide money for the artsy-craftsy scholarships that some area youngsters need to further a career.

It sponsors a $500 tuition bursary fund, but the big scholarships are passed out by the province on advice of the council.

To date, said Sherwood, the council has taken care to see that the dollars it dispenses go only to the small amateur groups and that no quarrel can be raised with the grant.

His statement recalled the Canada Council's running feud with taxpayers who don't want to see their money go to support town fools and piano smashers.

MAINTAIN AUTONOMY

By being circumspect, the local arts council and the other 31 in B.C. will maintain their autonomy and Speaker Murray can leave them to call shots.

The groups who received arts council money this year are The Amity Singers, $300; Community Arts Council Tuition Bursaries, $500; Country Church Players, $250; Craigdarroch Castle Society, $100; Greater Victoria Creative Centres Organization, $500; Greater Victoria Schools Senior Symphony Orchestra, $200; Royal Conservatory of Toronto Alumni, $75; St. Luke's Players, $250; Victoria Choral Society, $800; Victoria Hand Weavers Guild, $150; Victoria Musical Art Society, $200; Victoria Operatic Society, $1,775, and the Victoria Theatre Guild, $1,400.

The rest of the $10,500 goes to pay rent on the council's 1960 Lansdowne office and Sherwood's salary for his part-time work.

Collision Kills 7

FUKUSHIMA, Japan (Reuters)—A car ran into an overturned truck, killing seven persons and injuring 14 others in this northern Japan city today. The truck, carrying 17 women field workers, overturned in front of the car after being hit by another truck from behind.

Weather Ship Refit Done Between Trips

A recent annual overhaul for the weathership Quadra cost $14,484, the department of transport has announced.

Quadra and her sister ship Vancouver collect and report weather data in alternate six-week stints from Station Papa, 600 miles west of Victoria.

DOT Victoria director Larry Slaght said the department now hopes to complete annual refits on the two vessels during one of the five-week periods they spend in port.

He said the refits were formerly done "in bits and pieces."

Quadra spent just over a month in the Yarrows Ltd. shipyard before returning to Station Papa two weeks ago. Vancouver is due for her refit in August.

Thomson Mostly U.S.

TORONTO (CP) — Thomson Newspaper Ltd. had net profits of $2.1 million or 12 cents a share for the three months ended March 30 compared with $1.58 million, or nine cents a share for the similar period last year.

I. H. Macdonald, deputy chairman, told the annual meeting that the increase was due to the gradual absorption of the company's acquisitions last year, as well as an improvement in administration of operations.

The Thomson organization acquired five newspapers last year, bringing its holdings in North America to 61 daily and 24 weekly newspapers.

Circulation of the company's newspapers in North America now is 350,000 in Canada and 750,000 in the U.S., he said.

"This means that about two-thirds of our operations are in the U.S." Macdonald said.

Lumber Export

Shipments of lumber by ship from Vancouver during April were slightly higher than April 1968, but the footage for the entire first quarter was down, compared with the four months in 1968, lumber mills reported Tuesday.

The month's footage was 257 million, up 33 million board feet, while the quarterly shipments declined to 888 million from 939 million feet a year ago.

Crown Zellerbach

An improvement program to cost $9.5 million is to be launched by Crown Zellerbach at its Port Angeles pulp and paper mill, directly across Juan de Fuca Strait from Victoria.

To be completed in 1970, the program is aimed at improving newsprint quality and related grades of paper, and increasing diversification.

Tartan Beer

Selkirk, 20 miles north of Winnipeg, is the likely site of a new brewery planned by Ben Ginter of Prince George.

Ginter, president of Tartan Brewing Ltd., said Monday he has decided upon Selkirk as the location and now it is up to the "mayor and his council" to approve the agreement.

Last year, Ginter sought to build the $2.5 million plant in the rural municipality of St. Andrews but was blocked by the Metropolitan Winnipeg council.

Syncrude Canada Ltd.

J. H. Laycroft, lawyer for Syncrude Canada Ltd. said there is only one reason for rejecting the firm's application to build a $200 million plant which would extract oil from the Athabasca oil sands in northeastern Alberta.

He said in a hearing before the Alberta Oil and Gas Conservation Board the reason is whether a predicted deficiency in the U.S. supply of crude oil will exist by 1976, when the proposed plant would start up.

Banker Calls For Greater Investment

By TOM CARNEY

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian businessmen should invest more in industrializing Pacific rim countries, Takeshi Watanabe, Philippine president of the Asian Development Bank said Wednesday.

He told 300 business and community leaders Canadian businessmen have great technical knowledge in projects such as resource roads and harbor facilities which could profitably be put to use in many parts of Asia.

"It must be obvious that even a small percentage increase in Asian purchasing power can mean a tremendous absolute increase in demand for goods and services," he said.

"Exploitation of valuable natural resources is one obvious area in which Canadian businessmen have unique experience and expertise . . ."

He said Canadians are already well represented on such bodies as the Private Investment Company for Asia and appear likely "to reap rewards as well as to provide employment and other benefits to the countries in which investments are made."

He said his bank, an international organization established in 1966, has commitments totalling $66.4 million, including such projects as modernizing tea factories in Ceylon, a water supply system in the state of Penang and construction of palm oil mills and other undertakings in Taiwan, Pakistan, Thailand, Korea and the Philippines.

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

Use of Capital Resources Determines Real Success

By EDGAR A. DOWNEY, C. A

(This is a service provided by the Times and by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of British Columbia.)

Equity capital is the cornerstone upon which business is built.

Most successful businesses have the correct amount of capital; and most unsuccessful businesses have either too much or too little.

If a business has funds, or plant and equipment, lying idle, the management is failing in its duty to the business owners.

Ironically, this failing most often occurs when the management lies directly in the hands of the proprietor or controlling shareholder. The manager-owner is often unaware that he has idle funds or plant and has no one to goad him to develop new ideas to put his capital to work. He does not recognize the possibilities of purchasing new equipment to improve efficiency, or operating a second, and a third, shift to increase production from the existing plant.

He considers that new products and volume production can only be handled by his big, successful competitors. Of course that is exactly right, because that is the way the competitors became big and successful.

USE LEVERAGE

Management which does not make use of the leverage of loan capital, to the extent that is reasonable for their type of business, to provide funds for expansion, is lacking in aggressive leadership. The businessman who is proud to say that he has no debt is probably failing to fully employ his equity capital.

Conversely, there are many businesses which have over-expanded without adequate long-term capital to support the larger investment in plant and equipment.

These businesses constantly incur extra costs because of their lack of funds to meet their purchase commitments. They fail to obtain the benefits of lower prices of bulk buying, they lose their rights to cash discounts, and find themselves in a constant battle with their creditors. Then, when the usual credit sources have lost confidence, they resort to high-rate short-term financing and, thereby, add to the cost burden.

Too often the businessman will ignore his financial statements, the basic source of the information he needs to answer his capital problems. He is too busy, or too complacent to do more than look at the net result of profit or loss for the year. He looks upon the balance sheet as rather dull history and will not, or cannot, read it with comprehension.

READ RATIOS

The balance sheet will show him the ratios of equity capital to debt, and to working capital and other significant items. He should compare these various financial ratios of his particular business with the published figures of his trade.

Every business executive has a duty to himself, or his shareholders, to re-examine the capital structure of his business at least annually. He must determine whether he is overworking or underworking his capital.

Then he should be bold enough to take the actions necessary to bring the capital position into line with the needs of the business, or change the business into line with the capital.

The problem of capital changes will certainly demand ability, imagination, and sound judgment in order to work out solutions but, firstly, it will require recognition that the problem does exist.

Comedy of Errors Sank Submarine

VALLEJO, Calif. (UPI) — The dockside sinking of the $50,000,000 submarine Guittaro resulted from a "wholly avoidable" blunder which had separate work crews filling both ends of the ship at the same time, a U.S. Congressional investigation team reported Wednesday.

One crew of workmen were trying to "trim," or level, the vessel by pouring water into ballast tanks forward at the same time another crew put five tons of water in the aft section to carry out certain tests, the team reported.

While workmen in the forward part of the vessel were out to lunch, the crew in the aft section emptied water from its end. This caused the nose to go under, and water poured into open hatches, the Congressmen reported.

Desperate Bid to Close Bulkheads

When the submarine was seen to be sinking, the Congressmen said, workmen tried desperately to close bulkheads inside the submarine but found it impossible because of hoses and power lines strung through the doorways.

The sub sank in 36 feet of water at the Mare Island naval shipyard. Shipyard crews refloated the nuclear submarine in three days and restoration work was continuing.

The special three-member team of the House armed services subcommittee concluded the Guittaro sank as a result of "the concurrence of several wholly avoidable factors."

It said the "ultimate responsibility" for the accident must be borne by the Mare Island shipyard commander, Rear Adm. Norbert Frankenberger.

But the "proximate" cause of the catastrophe was "the deficient performance of the civilian supervisory personnel" on the job, the report said.

The Guittaro sank in 35 feet of water at the yard while undergoing final preparations for commissioning.

The group said the navy shipyard operated with "duplicating, overlapping and frequently conflicting channels of command." The resulting confusion left "inadequate co-ordination of both ship construction activities and the assignment of specific responsibilities."

BIKE-ATHON BRIGADE rolls happily along Hillside in the rain Wednesday on its way to Centennial Stadium at the University of Victoria. Students are from Esquimalt Junior Secondary, on their way to the inter-junior high school sports day to cheer on school's competitors. Divers Find Wreck Sunk Since 1906

Skindivers searching for a U.S. fur-trading ship which went down in Clayoquot Sound in 1811 have discovered the barque Coloma.

The Coloma was identified Wednesday after expedition leader Edmund Hayes of Portland, Ore., consulted with Mrs. Evelyn Green of Long Beach who has a diary referring to the ship's position when it sank in 1906 off Cape Beale.

When first discovered the ship was believed to be the U.S. schooner Hera.

The Coloma was an 850-ton wooden vessel loaded with timber for Australia when it ran into a southeastern gale in the Sound.

Thomas Paterson, lighthouse-keeper at Cape Beale, spotted the vessel with its flag flying upside down (the international distress signal).

Since he could not leave his post and the telephone lines were down, his wife Minnie made a perilous six-mile journey along the coast and with a friend, Mrs. Annie McKay, rowed out to the lighthouse tender Quadra to raise the alarm.

The Quadra was able to rescue the captain and nine crew members of the Coloma moments before it sank.

Hayes, a lumberman who searches for wrecks as a hobby, and two skindivers are continuing their search for the Tonquin this week.

One of the skindivers on the expedition is Roderick Palm, a commercial diver from Sooke, the other an American.

COMMON BOUNDS KEY TO PROGRESS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The importance of finding common interests among people to achieve human progress was stressed Wednesday by Arnold Smith, secretary-general of the Commonwealth, in a speech to the 1969 convocation of the University of British Columbia.

Mr. Smith, speaking to the first of three sessions of the convocation, said co-operation is important to create dialogue "across the lines of race, of wealth, of religion, that could . . . fragment mankind."

The Toronto-born diplomat, awarded an honorary doctor of laws degree, said an example of this co-operation is the Commonwealth.

The graduates of today will influence the course of history, he said. "I hope that this influence will be directed . . . to the achievement of a safer and more effective world community."

City Chemists With Institute

Three Victoria men were honored this week at the annual conference of the Chemical Institute of Canada, being held in Montreal.

Dr. W. C. Horning, an associate professor of chemistry at Royal Roads Military College, was elected a councillor of the institute while two other Victoria chemists were named fellows of the institute, an honorary title.

They are Dr. A. G. Bricknell, dean of science and head of the Royal Roads Military College's chemistry department, and Dr. R. N. O'Brien, professor of chemistry at the University of Victoria.

As a member of the 36-man council, Dr. Horning will serve on the policy-making body of the institute.

Firms Increase Bilingual Grocery Labels

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian manufacturers of grocery products have adopted a code to improve bilingual labelling practices on items sold in the country's bilingual areas.

G. G. E. Steele, president of the Grocery Products Manufacturers of Canada, announced today the code calls for all packages or labels on items produced in Canada to be printed in English and French.

The code applies to items sold in such areas as Quebec and the Maritimes or where the consumers make up a minority of 10 per cent of English-speaking or French-speaking people.

The 75-member organization was formed in 1959 to set and maintain standards for the industry and to represent it before government and the public.

Mr. Steele estimated that by 1971 the over-all majority of the group's members will have 100 per cent of their products labelled in accordance with the code and other existing regulations.

WILL TAKE TIME

"It has been, and will continue to be, a complex and time-consuming process. A conservative estimate of the number of individual products involved would be between 15,000 and 20,000.

"However, it is a question of vital interest to the industry and we are anxious to comply fully with existing regulations and our own code just as quickly as possible."

Mr. Steele said that by far the greatest number of the member companies already carry essentially bilingual labels on most of their products.

"However, the intention of the new code is to encourage all members to improve the visual balance of the two languages where necessary as well as to stress the importance of bilingual labels among the minority who have yet to begin using them."

Mr. Steele said "all relevant information" must be printed in the two languages, each receiving equal prominence. This included all information necessary to the consumer in making a purchase or in the correct use of the product.

But, he said, it does not include the duplication of trade marks or company names and addresses in two languages.

Epidemic Warned

City-Born Soldier Given Post

LONDON (CP) — Lt.-Gen. Sir John Mogg, who will become adjutant-general of the British Army in June, 1970, is a Canadian-born soldier who still holds a Canadian passport.

Mogg, 56, currently commander of the British Army Strategic Command, was born in Victoria, B.C., in 1913. His father, an army engineer, had decided to farm in British Columbia after fighting in the Boer War. He later returned to England to participate in the First World War and the Second World War.

Mogg was sent to England for public school training followed by Sandhurst and a British Army career. He won the Distinguished Service Order and bar during the Second World War in 1944.

Oddly enough, his appointment as head of the Strategic Command will be taken over by another Canadian-born soldier who also holds a double DSO. He is Lt.-Gen Sir Mervyn Butler, 58, who at present heads the 1st Army Corps in Germany. He was born in Toronto on Dominion Day, 1913.

The appointments mark Mogg's second successive handover to Butler who took Mogg's post in Germany last year.

Army Truck Proves Killer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government is making an unprecedented inquiry into the performance of one of the army's best known vehicles which statistics show has killed or injured thousands of American soldiers.

The investigation of the familiar, jeep-type M-151 truck will be conducted by the national highway safety bureau.

The army has purchased 123,017 of the M-151s from Ford Motor Co. since 1960, at an aggregate cost of nearly $400,000,000.

It tends to tip over. Incomplete army statistics show hundreds of soldiers have been killed and thousands disabled since the vehicle came into service.

In the fiscal year 1967, the army totalled 3,538 accidents worldwide involving the M-151, with 104 soldiers killed, 1,858 injured.

An estimated 90,000 M-151s remain on duty around the world today, with 12,346 in the continental United States, often using public highways.

High Finance Controls Quebec Press, Probe Told

QUEBEC (CP) — The editors of a small French-language magazine Wednesday called for a "genuine commission of inquiry" into the influence of Power Corp. of Canada Ltd. on the Quebec press.

The recommendation by Editions Maintenant Inc. of Montreal was made in one of two briefs to the national assembly's committee on freedom of the press which sits again next Wednesday.

Power Corp. poses a "genuine threat to freedom of the press . . . to the right of citizens to be informed," said the brief from representatives of Maintenant, a monthly whose circulation was estimated at "between 9,000 and 10,000."

But under questioning, the Maintenant representatives did not provide any concrete examples to prove that the right of citizens to be informed had been abused by Power Corp.

The Maintenant brief also included scathing criticism of wire services providing news to the Quebec media.

Another brief by a spokesman for news media owners suggested that press freedom in the province can best be assured by "a gentlemen's agreement."

The Maintenant case was stated by three journalists, including Rev. Vincent Harvey, 45, a Dominican priest who has been managing editor since 1965.

TABLES MAGAZINE

Tabled with the Maintenant brief was the May issue of the magazine whose cover story is titled The Real Masters of Quebec: The Power Corporation Empire.

Also tabled was the April-May-June issue of a French-language review known as Socialisme 69, which includes an article by Jacques Guay entitled A Servile Press: The Facts.

In articles in both Maintenant and Socialisme, Mr. Guay, 32, writes that with few exceptions news media in Quebec "are in the hands of high finance."

Mr. Guay writes in Maintenant that Quebec's press "is under the yoke of news agencies."

He says:

"UPI (United Press International) is quite simply rotten. Canadian Press is half rotten: The French part and at least half of the English part. The other agencies, Reuters, Associated Press, AFP (Agence France-Presse), each have their weaknesses. . . ."

He does not document his article with any examples of "rotten" news service copy.

. . . TRUDEAU

An almost identical pattern results from voters' replies to questions about their personal financial circumstances. In every case, the Prairies are the region least satisfied.

Nationally, 29 per cent said they were "pretty well satisfied" with the way they were getting on financially, 41 per cent claimed they were "more or less satisfied," 28 per cent answered "not at all satisfied" with 2 per cent unsure.

Prairies residents were the most dissatisfied with 34 per cent in this category. The Atlantic provinces are close behind with 32 per cent. British Columbians were the most satisfied with 35 per cent.

Across the country, 21 per cent stated that they were "better off" financially today than a year ago, 22 per cent claimed they were "worse off," 55 per cent said their situation is "about the same" with 2 per cent unsure.

People living on the Prairies are more likely to claim they are "worse off" than those living elsewhere: 28 per cent feel this way.

Looking ahead to a year from now, 21 per cent of the national sample expect things will be better for them and their families, 18 per cent forecast that they will be worse, 50 per cent predict no change, with 11 per cent not sure.

Only 8 per cent on the Prairies and 10 per cent in the Atlantic provinces expect their own financial situation to improve in the next year. In contrast, 26 per cent of Ontarians and British Columbians and 24 per cent of Quebecers are optimistic.

These findings reinforce other patterns revealed in the survey and reported in previous articles. On every topic — job-rating the prime minister, the most important issues, judging Trudeau's performance in office — the Prairies have turned out to be the least satisfied.

But, even more significantly, after one year of Pierre Trudeau occupying its highest political office, Canada continues to be a highly regionalized country: the region in which people live continues to be the most important element in the way they perceive national events.

Politicians and commentors may like to use slogans such as "one Canada" and "the new politics." But they are just that — slogans.

The hard reality of Canadian society remains.

BLOOD TARGET TOPPED

Servicemen donated 281 pints of blood Wednesday at the Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt, and helped achieve the target set for a three-day series of Red Cross donor clinics.

The final day was the most successful, Monday producing 104 pints, and Tuesday, 223. Both of these clinics were held at Red Cross House.

A total of 608 pints was received, exceeding the objective by 58 pints.

TOP SOIL

By far the cheapest soil nutrient for your lawn and shrubs. If applied as top dressing. (one yard for every 600 sq. ft., it will, after three yearly applications develop a thick and lasting turf that feels like a soft carpet. That is how good and lasting lawns used to be made. Top-dressed lawns moreover are far less vulnerable to weeds and most important of all require less watering. One yard of top soil weighing about 2,500 pounds costs you four dollars. In comparsion, one dollar of chemical fertilizer will buy only about 15 pounds of fertilizer which at best contains only 3 pounds of plant food. It will therefore only act as a short-lived stimulant without any lasting value.

Hurry-Up Style Suits Coquitlam

Adanacs in Spoiling Role For Shamrocks' Opener

Victoria, 8; Coquitlam, 13

Coquitlam Adanacs are placing the emphasis on shooting and hurry-up lacrosse, and that seems to be the ticket to the early, front-runnning seat in the Western Association.

The Adanacs shot often and scurried well, and that was enough to ease them to a comfortable 13-8 victory Wednesday to spoil Victoria Shamrocks' home opener at Memorial Arena.

Counting the wild ones, Coquitlam players rapid-fired 91 shots in the general direction of Victoria goaltender Doug Thompson. Thirteen went in, 23 were wide, and Thompson handled the remaining 45.

Victoria unleashed 58, all told, so the respective totals indicate Adanacs are making the most of the new regulation which insists that attackers shoot within 30 seconds after gaining possession of the ball.

Before the regulation became the new lacrosse law, any team mustering more than 40 shots was deemed to have a good night.

As impressive as Adanacs may have appeared to Victoria's opening-night crowd of 1,647, they have been sharper. League commissioner Tom English, "sold" on the new shooting law, reported the Coquitlam hustlers fired over 100 shots in each of their two previous games.

"Only" 91 was a sum that still pleased Adanac coach Bobby Marsh.

"I figure that's a good total for a road game," said Marsh. "I'm sure we could have reached the 100 figure for a third straight game, but when we enjoyed four and five-goal leads in the third period, I gave orders to slow down and use up as much of the 30 seconds as possible.

"Running and shooting is the only way to play this game, and I thought my guys did it very well tonight."

EXPERIENCE, TOO!

They did indeed. Coquitlam's style and not-to-be-overlooked experience made it a rough night for Victoria's defences. It was Victoria's laxity on defence and in checking that contributed most to Shamrocks' downfall.

Some of the fans began to fault Thompson after Coquitlam rang up seven goals in the opening period. But Thompson, in the opinion of Marsh and Victoria coach Tom Druce, "played very well but lacked support."

Kerry Gallagher and rookie Wayne Spooner topped Coquitlam's goal-scoring production with three apiece. Veterans Mike Gates and John Allen each added a pair while Bill Bradley, Dick Crompton and Alec Carey tossed in singles. Bradley, a one-time Rock, also picked up three assists.

VETERANS COOL

Al McLean and Chuck Hardy each scored twice for Shamrocks while Nirmal Dillon, Bob Harris, Ken Alexander and Tom Churchill contributed singles.

McLean also managed a pair of assists for a four-point night.

For Druce, the big disappointment was the performance of some of his veterans. Ranjit Dillon, the team's scoring leader last year, drew a pair of assists but failed to get a shot on goal for one of the very few times in his senior career.

Don McNeill, Charn Dhillon and Alexander also were generally overshadowed by Victoria rookies.

The Shamrocks visit Coquitlam this Saturday, then face Vancouver in Memorial Arena on June 7.

Open Tourney Canadian Aim

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian hockey officials have agreed to try to talk world amateur hockey championship organizers into declaring the annual tournament open to professionals.

Hockey Canada directors said they plan to send a strong delegation to the International Ice Hockey Federation meeting at Geneva, Switzerland, in July to try to achieve this goal.

Hockey Canada, which took over the operation of Canada's national team earlier this year, named five men for the July 5-12 IIHF session in Geneva. The representatives are: Stafford Smythe, president of the National Hockey League's Toronto Maple Leafs; Douglas Fisher of Toronto, a former member of Parliament; Earle Dawson of Winnipeg, Canadian Amateur Hockey Association president; Gordon Juckes of Winnipeg, CAHA executive director; and Leighton A. (Hap) Emms of Niagara Falls, Ont., the national team's managing director.

"I hope they will be backed up by government officials," said Charles Hay of Calgary, a Hockey Canada vice-president. "We are hoping to get a prominent member or two of the government to go with us."

NOT OPTIMISTIC

Emms was not enthusiastic about the prospects of an open tournament.

"I doubt very much if we'll get it," he said.

Wednesday's Hockey Canada session followed one week of private consultation in Montreal with J. F. (Bunny) Ahearne of London, IIHF president.

"Hockey Canada invited Ahearne to Canada," Hay said, ". . . so the CAHA, NHL and Hockey Canada could bring him up to date on the type of team we want for 1970."

The next world hockey tournament is scheduled for Canada in 1970 with championship group games played in Montreal and Winnipeg.

Hay said the delegation to Geneva will pursue other matters concerning national team personnel.

"Another is the arrangement regarding the reinstatement of pros. We're going to press for the right to use more pros, at least 12. At present the pros must be reinstated a year prior to the tournament. We want to change the date to February 1, the year of the tournament."

Emms said he would be satisfied with a definition of the word amateur that would be acceptable to all participating countries. He said Russia and other countries pay their players and he saw no reason Canada should be prevented from doing the same.

Silent Slusher A Pitching Usher

CINCINNATI (AP) — Alton Slusher has been sweeping out Crosley Field here after baseball games when he could well have been on the field playing.

Montreal Expos have signed the 18-year-old Cincinnati lad. Although he worked at Crosley Field, the Reds were not aware of his pitching talent.

"I never told anyone I could pitch," said Slusher.

Montreal scout Terry Boyle discovered Slusher as he worked out with an amateur team here.

THREE MORE RECEIVE SCHOLARSHIP AWARDS

British Columbia High School Boys' Basketball Association scholarships continue to flit into the Victoria area.

The awarding of three $100 scholarships raised to five the total presented to district players this week. Latest recipients are Barry Moen, of the B.C. champion Victoria High Totems, and Fergie Andison and Don Burrows, of Oak Bay.

Oak Bay standouts Tom Holmes and Brent Mullin were handed $200 scholarships earlier this week.

Record-Breaking May Enjoys Red-Letter Day

By The Associated Press

No matter how hard Jimmy Wynn hits and how fast Houston Astros run, they can't seem to catch Lee May and Cincinnati Reds, who stand one homer, one base and one and a half games ahead.

May got Cincinnati moving Wednesday night with a record-tying two home runs. Then Johnny Bench stole second and Tony Perez home on a delayed double steal in the eighth inning for the winning run in a 7-6 victory over Pittsburgh.

Close on their heels were Wynn and the red-hot Astros.

Wynn's lone homer dropped him one behind May for the National League lead. The Astros only stole second and third on a double steal in the 10th before Doug Rader followed with his second straight game-winning hit as Houston edged Philadelphia 7-6.

Houston's victory was its 10th in a row, longest winning streak in the major leagues this season, but it didn't get the fifth-place Astros any closer than 1½ games behind fourth place Cincinnati in the Western Division as the Reds won their sixth consecutive game.

At the same time, Montreal dropped farther behind everyone when Los Angeles handed the Expos their 12th successive defeat, 6-0.

In other games, New York Mets ended a five-game losing streak with a 1-0 victory over San Diego Padres in 11 innings, St. Louis Cardinals bounced Atlanta 6-2 and Chicago Cubs tripped San Francisco Giants 9-8.

May, who hit two homers Saturday night and two more Sunday before two open days, clubbed a solo shot in the fourth inning against the Pirates and added his 14th with a man on in the sixth for a 6-4 lead, making him only the fifth man in history to hit six in three consecutive games.

Pittsburgh tied the game with runs in the seventh and eighth, but Perez opened the Cincinnati eighth with a single. May lined out, but Bench singled Perez to third and then the two pulled off their double steal.

WYNN HITS 13TH

Wynn put the Astros ahead 4-3 in the fifth with his 13th homer, but Johnny Callison's homer in the seventh and Richie Allen's two-run shot in the ninth pulled the Phillies even 6-6.

In the 10th, Joe Morgan walked, Wynn sacrificed and Norm Miller was walked intentionally before Morgan and Miller pulled their double steal. Another intentional walk to Denis Menke brought up Rader who got the game-winning hit, giving the Astros their 19th victory in 23 starts in May.

In the American League, Seattle Pilots sent the wrong man up at bat at the wrong time and it cost them runs as they lost to Baltimore Orioles 9-5.

On the lineup card, Seattle manager Joe Schultz had Wayne Comer batting third and Tommy Davis fourth.

SWITCHED ORDER

When Baltimore's pitcher Jim Palmer didn't start—the Orioles went with a left-hander instead—Schultz switched his lineup putting Davis ahead of Comer.

With two out in the fifth, Davis hit a two-run double and Earl Weaver, Baltimore manager, protested that Davis had hit out of order. The umpires agreed and Davis became the third out of the inning.

The win kept the Orioles in first place in the Eastern Division, 3½ games ahead of Boston Red Sox who defeated Kansas City Royals 4-3.

In other action, Detroit Tigers edged Oakland Athletics 3-2, California beat Cleveland 5-4, Chicago White Sox beat New York Yankees 7-6 and Washington Senators beat Minnesota Twins 4-3.

Andretti Issues Threat After Radiator Ruling

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP)—With the start of the Indianapolis 500 only 24 hours away, controversy raged at the speedway over rules interpretation that affects at least two or the contending cars.

Mario Andretti, who qualified his Brawner Hawk-Ford in the No. 2 spot in the 33-car lineup for Friday's noon start, threatened to pull out of the race unless a decision affecting him is rescinded.

Andretti was ordered Wednesday by chief steward Harlan Fengler to remove a special radiator that was installed on the car after it qualified last weekend.

Fengler also ordered a new oil cooler removed from the Wynn's Mongoose-Offenhauser to be driven by veteran Lloyd Ruby.

Fengler said the installations on the Andretti and Ruby cars violated a U.S. Auto Club rule that prohibits any change in the configuration of a car after it has qualified.

CHANGED HIS MIND

A spokesman for the STP Corp., which sponsors Andretti's car, said that Fengler had told Andretti Tuesday addition of the radiator would be permissible.

The STP spokesman said Fengler changed his mind—after the crew had worked most of Tuesday night installing the device.

Andretti and the other drivers were to meet with Fengler today in the annual pre-race session at which rules for the race are laid down.

Most observers predicted that cooler heads would prevail and that Andretti would be in the race.

Montreal Obtains Franchise

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — The American Hockey League granted a franchise Wednesday to a Montreal team which will be owned and operated by the National Hockey League champion Montreal Canadiens.

The team—first new club to be admitted since Baltimore eight years ago—will begin playing in the 1969-70 season. It will play its home games in Montreal Forum.

The Canadiens paid an undisclosed franchise fee to the AHL, which said it was being distributed equally among the eight other teams.

MacLeod Defends City Golf Honors

Three former champions, including the defending titleholder, head the entries preparing to scramble for the Victoria City amateur golf championship.

The 54-hole event will be played at Victoria Golf Club. First 36 holes will be played this Sunday and the final round on June 8.

Players also will campaign for the Matson Trophy, awarded on a handicap basis.

Defending the city title will be Gorge Vale's Al MacLeod. Also on hand will be Laurie Kerr, six-time city champion from Colwood, and Uplands' Frank Scroggs, who triumphed in 1959.

Defending the Matson Trophy is Uplands' Ted Pollard.

With an entry of 94—the largest in several years—post entries will not be accepted.

EIGHT-MAN TEAMS . . . BUT FOUR-BALL PLAY STAYS

Enlarged Inter-Club League Ready to Tee Off

The controversy that delayed the start of Victoria's Inter-Club Golf League one week appears to have been cleared, and the district's top golfers start swinging for The Willie Park Driver next Wednesday.

It will be a vastly different league in comparision to the original one that vied for the coveted trophy.

Originally, Uplands, Colwood, Victoria and Gorge Vale clubs named six-man teams to compete in a round-robin, home-and-home series.

But the addition of Glen Meadows and Cedar Hill teams this year dictated a change in format, and one that stirred some controversy among the players.

Changes which appear to have hurdled some of the major objections were approved at a lengthy meeting of the Victoria District Golf Committee on Tuesday.

The original proposed format called for some league play on Saturdays—rather than the customary Wednesday dates—and the elimination of four-ball competition.

While opinions were divided about Saturday play, the majority of golfers objected strongly to the disappearance of four-ball play.

Both Wednesday-only and four-ball play were returned in the changes agreed upon at the meeting.

Teams, however, will be enlarged to eight-man squads. As well, the league will be split into two divisions. Uplands, Gorge Vale and Cedar Hill will be grouped in an "A" division while Glen Meadows, Colwood and Victoria will play in the "B" section.

The decision to enlarge teams to eight players was made to facilitate sheduling.

Only the four "original" courses will be used which, again, facilitates scheduling. Each of the three "A" section teams will send four men to Gorge Vale and four to Uplands. Similarly, "B" teams will play only at Victoria and Colwood.

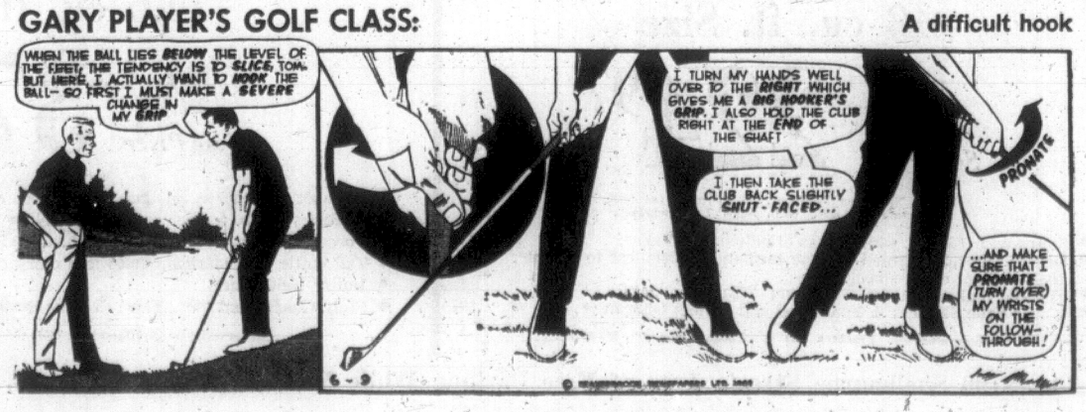
Top teams from each of the two sections will meet in a home-and-home series on June 25 and July 2 to decide the overall champion.

"While the format may appear complicated," said committeee chairman Harry Young, "it does look interesting. Most important, it appears we have managed to get over the objections to playing on Saturday and without the four-ball."

The draw, he added, "will have to be made on a hidden-key basis. Only secretary Viv Hicks and myself will know the key. The golfers won't know who they are to play until the draw is made on the Sunday preceeding the matches."

He emphasized that the league will "try it as an experiment for one year only."

GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS: A difficult hook



Oak Bay Anticipation Also a Winning Effort

FORMER Victoria Shamrock defenceman, Ray Beech is expected to join Victoria Kings for tonight's Vancouver Island Senior Lacrosse League game against Port Alberni. Memorial Arena contest gets under way at 8:30. Slated to return to Victoria lineup after one-game absence are John Hansen and Red Larsen.

By STEVE HUME

Officials were preparing to announce the winner of Victoria's Junior High School track championships Wednesday, when Oak Bay supporters swarmed onto the Centennial Stadium infield and raised their red and white banner.

The exuberant fans, it turned out, anticipated correctly, and although there was a close race from Lansdowne and Gordon Head, Oak Bay looked like the best bet halfway through Wednesday's track finals.

Kicking things off with a clean sweep of first place in all six junior boys' events, Oak Bay athletes went on to earn a total of 11 firsts to Lansdowne's five and Gordon Head's three.

That was a big factor in Oak Bay's steady roll to a total of 278 points against Lansdowne's second-place total of 247. Gordon Head, which got into second place a number of times, slipped back to third with 202 points, Central had 163, Colquitz 133½, Shoreline 50, Reynolds 46, S. J. Willis 46, and Esquimalt 9½.

When the victory was officially announced, Oak Bay spectators ran a victory lap with their red-suited athletes in a milling, cheering tangle of enthusiasm.

What happened didn't come as a complete surprise—the meet was a lively one from the word go, and 3,000 youngsters jamming the stadium generated vast quantities of tension and excitement.

But while the grandstands were filled with fun, the duels on the track were in deadly earnest, and straining athletes cracked nine records to add to those broken Monday in field events at Lansdowne.

BRAD IN FORM

Brad Yakubowich, running for Lansdowne, nailed down two of the records during the schoolboy sprint duel of the year with Gordon Head's Sid Chow.

Brad just nipped the Gordon Head runner in a record-breaking, 10.5-second senior hundred, and then beat him again decisively with another record in the 220 with a time of 23.3

But Chow got his revenge in running a brilliant anchor leg for Gordon Head's record-breaking 4x110 relay team, which clocked 46.3 seconds to lop three-tenths of a second off the old mark.

Two other senior boys cracked old marks on the track, Oak Bay's Rob Ross in the mile and Leigh Hegan of Colquitz in the 880.

IMPRESSIVE EFFORT

Ross, running a finely paced race, pounded out a 4:46.9 time to demolish the old record of 4:53.9 by almost eight seconds.

Hegan ran a brilliant tactical race against Ross and Alan Weicker of Oak Bay, hanging back, working his way out of a dangerous box, and kicking over the traces to win a finish in which all three were only inches apart.

His time of 2:05.1 was exceptionally good for a junior high athlete.

On the junior boys' side of things only one record was broken. Bohden Hryb of Oak Bay smashed the old 440 mark of 59.7 with a sizzling 57.5 in a spectacular duel with Barry Mack and Dave Reid of Lansdowne.

Distaff athletes got in on the mark-breaking too, with an outstanding performance coming from Gordon Head junior Debbie Reid, who set a new record of 2:31.1 in the 880 to completely smash the old mark of 2:42.9.

Both girls' 220 records also went. Junior Peggy Teagle of Oak Bay won with a 27.5 time, and senior Central runner Linda Eert clocked 26.5 for the other record.

Gypsies Might Disrupt Derby

EPSOM, England (AP)—Militant gypsies, fighting for their ancient traditions, are threatening to disrupt this year's Epsom Derby, England's premier horse race, June 4.

The gypsies have for nearly two centuries held one of their greatest annual festivals on Epsom Downs where the race is run.

Originally they met there to trade horses. Now they go to meet relatives, arrange marriages, bet on the horses, and further their fortunes by telling other peoples'.

Now the word has gone round that their annual camp on the Downs is illegal and that security men will be on hand to keep the campers away. The gypsies, backed by 22-year-old Irish member of Parliament, Bernadette Devlin, say they'll start moving to the Downs Friday.

The gypsy council met the Epsom Downs conservators earlier in the week but said it was given no hope that legal camping space would be set aside.

The threat of disruption, according to a spokesman for the conservator was issued at this meeting. Possible methods mentioned were ripping up the track or putting roadblocks across it.

The conservators say that gypsies rights to camp on the Downs vanished with an act of Parliament in 1936 which transferred commoners' rights to racecourse authorities.

Since 1936, the conservators say, illegal campers have been served with court summonses but have seldom bothered to turn up in court. This year the conservators plan to tighten up.

Ribofilio, owned by Charles Englehard of New York, is the 7-to-2 favorite in the Derby.

You can't send the kid up in a crate like that! But they did. The bush pilots who opened up our north country flew in open cockpits with rain in the face and wind whining in the struts. After a trip like that, they were ready for a brew like Old Style. Today it's still slow-brewed the natural way, for men who appreciate a down-to-earth flavour.

Three Fires Set in Barn

VANCOUVER (CP) — The fire marshal's office launched a full-scale investigation Wednesday into the possibility of arson in the wake of a fire that swept through barn No. 10 at Exhibition Park in Vancouver, killing 21 race horses and resulting in the death of a trainer.

Officials said the fire, which broke out just before midnight Tuesday, was the third discovered within a 90-minute period in the 40-stall barn. All are believed to have been set deliberately in feed rooms.

Police and fire marshals, who said a man had been seen running away from the barn shortly before the major fire was discovered, questioned several persons Wednesday morning but no arrests had been made.

Nineteen of the 21 horses were burned to death in their stalls as flames beat back frantic attempts by trainers and stablehands to free them.

Two others had to be destroyed, including one fire-crazed thoroughbred that dashed from the exhibition grounds into the path of an automobile.

At the height of the fire, trainer Jack Russell of Vancouver collapsed with a heart attack while helping to free horses. He died an hour later.

Merv Peters, director of racing for the B.C. Jockey Club, said most of the horses were young, untried racers. He estimated their value at between $75,000 and $80,000.

Fifteen of the 21 horses were under the care of trainer Sonny O'Connell, leading trainer at the track last year who operates Cossack Stable as a public stable for various owners.

B.C.'S WORST

Wednesday's fire was the worst track fire in B.C. history. The previous worst was at Victoria's Sandown Park on Oct. 16, 1966, when 15 horses died. Later, John Castagne, 28, a former jockey, pleaded guilty to a charge of arson and was sentenced to three years in prison.

Horses destroyed:

Prince Peter, Penlan, Vantaur, owned by John Redekop and Bob Lee of Redlee farms, Vancouver;
Skip Willie, owned by M. Gordon Clark, Haney;
Shot O Malt, Fleet Winner, owned by Ken O'Connell, Cossack Stables, Vancouver;

Burnside Crews In Malkin Final

The final for the Malkin Cup, a men's triples competition for district lawn bowlers, became an all-Burnside affair Wednesday.

Andy Dickie and Alex Donald guided their crews into tonight's final at the Burnside greens. Dickie defeated Bert Bennett's entry 19-7 while Donald rallied to edge Danny Millar 15-12.

One-China Policy Acceptable—Sharp

TORONTO (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Wednesday night that Canada is prepared to accept a one-China policy as a basis for negotiating the recognition of Communist China.

Mr. Sharp addressed a Canadian Institute of International Affairs meeting, which was closed to reporters. Later, he said he had reviewed Canadian policy toward NATO and the recognition of China.

He said that early in the discussions between Canada and Peking representatives it was learned that the Chinese would demand that Canada adopt a one-China policy before serious negotiations could begin.

"We said that's fine, that's your position, and we will have to give the matter serious consideration.

"We have now decided to accept the proposition that we will formally recognize that there is one government of China, but we will hope to maintain an ad hoc recognition of the present government of Taiwan."

Mr. Sharp said the recognition of Peking was consistent with the aims of a new and independent foreign policy which he said emerged from the government's review of foreign policy.

"This review is probably the most exhaustive and thorough review of any policy ever undertaken by any Canadian government," he said. "I can assure you that we have left no possible approach toward international problems out of our consideration."

UNDESIRABLE ACTIVITIES NOT MY IDEA—SOROKIN

KRESTOVA, B.C. (CP—Stefan Sorokin, spiritual leader of the Sons of Freedom Doukhobors, said Wednesday the activities that led to his sect's undesirable image were instigated by members who intended to disrupt it.

The Freedomite leader told about 150 Doukhobors at this West Kootenay community the undesirable activities, which he did not specify, were not done at his instigation.

In a three-hour speech in Russian, Mr. Sorokin emphasized the need for an end to bickering among Doukhobor sects. His comments were later repeated to a reporter in a brief interview.

Mr. Sorokin's wife, who speaks good English said they are on a private holiday and did not want to be disturbed by reporters.

Political Victory For Communists

The United States could win the Vietnam war militarily, a Canadian army officer said Wednesday, "but if it isn't won politically, what do you win?"

Major L. B. Cross, who spent nearly two years in North and South Vietnam with the International Control Commission, was speaking in the Bay Street Armory to a meeting of the United Services Institute.

He said Ho Chi Minh would have been elected leader of Vietnam if free elections had been held in 1956, as called for in the Geneva Convention.

He described Ho as a peasant, with the result all peasants identify more with "old papa Ho" than they do with the Saigon governments.

Major Cross said it costs the U.S. $2½ billion a month to conduct the war, with 90 per cent of the Vietnamese making their living off it, either legitimately or by black market dealing.

The South Vietnamese army, about a million strong, has 60,000-70,000 desertions a month.

When someone asked "What does Canada mean to them?" the major said:

"Not very much. Outside our villa in Hanoi the children threw rocks and ox dung at us when we appeared, and stuck their tongues out and made rude gestures."

He said the country would probably go Communist when the fighting ended, but added it wouldn't necessarily be a bad thing.

"I can see them set up as a Communist country with a status similar to that of Yugoslavia, rather than as a hard-core Communist state.

"The Vietnamese are a small, scrappy people—but scatter-brained—who lack education and expertise. They need controlled growth of their economy."

Major Cross is staff officer, plans and operations, at Pacific region headquarters, Vancouver.

Foreign Travel Agents Wooed By Province

Thirty foreign travel agents are touring British Columbia as guests of the provincial Department of Travel Industry.

Five agents from Hong Kong, ten from Japan, and 15 from Hawaii will visit centres throughout the province this week.

"Our purpose is to expand Pacific travel area opportunities for the province," said deputy travel minister R. B. Worley.

The group started in Vancouver, saw Nanaimo, and spent a night in Victoria where they were given a dinner by the Department of Travel Industry.

They are now travelling to the Okanagan area and will finish the tour at Banff and fly home from Calgary.

CHURCH services for black and whites have been organized in South Africa by Presbyterian minister Rev. Robert J. D. Robertson of Johannesburg. He will tell his story at a public meeting organized by Victoria Council of Churches in the youth room of First United Church this evening at 8.

Parents Want No Subsidy

The Foster Parents' Association of the Family and Children's Service stated today that it does not recommend adoption subsidies for the majority of cases.

Officials said that if subsidized adoptions were available they should only be used in special cases where existing methods have not obtained full family status for the children.

"Those applying for financial reasons only would be rejected."

Officials cited a statement made in the Child Welfare League of America Standards for Adoption in 1959:

"Consideration should be given to supplementing income of families that have the essential qualifications to meet the needs of children for whom there are insufficient homes but whose income is too low to assume the full cost of care of a child."

Program Content Next Target For Radio-TV Commission

By TOM MITCHELL

OTTAWA (CP) — Fourteen months after its birth date, the Canadian Radio-Television Commission is going to take its first public look at broadcasting's end product—programs.

Not that the regulatory agency has been ignoring programs since it came into being April 1, 1968.

But its plate has been stacked so high with things on the nuts-and-bolts side of broadcasting—what to do about cable TV, the usual run of share transfer applications and the applications for technical facility changes that constantly crop up—that to date it has not been able to open up a full-fledged discussion on the material that gets to the audience.

At least one facet of programming, that on frequency-modulation radio, is going to get a thorough airing at a CRTC public hearing opening June 10 in Montreal. The commission has issued a notice calling on interested parties to present their views.

HINTS AT CHANGES

The discussion notice makes it clear that the CRTC is hardly ecstatic about the way FM has developed so far in Canada and hints strongly at some regulatory steps that could be adopted to change things.

There are 78 FM radio stations in Canada although there is frequency space for more than 500, the notice states. And 65 of the 78 FM stations are associated with mother stations in the regular amplitude-modulation band, often carrying mainly the same program fare as is available on the AM station.

"In all, 30 per cent of today's standard AM programming is duplicated on FM radio," the CRTC says.

FM sound is of higher fidelity than AM, is less susceptible to interference and can be used for stereophonic broadcasting, providing sound reproduction close to what a listener would hear in a concert hall or theatre.

POTENTIAL LITTLE USED

The CRTC notice says this FM potential is largely untapped in Canada.

"These electronic characteristics open to the broadcaster a field of programming in music, sound and voice programs capable of enhancing listener experience and enjoyment.

"In addition, stereophonic FM broadcasting offers possibilities for a vast variety of programming in a broadcast band which is, as yet, relatively unoccupied."

The commission recently denied four applications by AM broadcasters for FM licences where the FM programming was to be largely duplication of the AM fare. The denial noted the applicants would not provide "significantly new or different programming" to the audience.

The CRTC said it is determined that FM be developed in a way that will contribute to more varied programming than is available on AM and in a way that will make real use of FM's technical capabilities.

SETS OUT QUESTIONS

For the Montreal hearing, the CRTC has set out some specific questions on which it wants comment. These include:

—Under what circumstances should joint AM-FM programming be allowed and what should be the maximum permissible duplication?

—What would be the financial effect on existing operators if complete separation between AM and FM programming should be required?

—Should holders of AM broadcasting licences be granted FM licences for the same coverage areas?

—Should FM's programming scope be limited to the so-called quality music, and just what is quality music?

—Does FM have a responsibility to serve minority audience groups whose taste in programs is largely ignored by present AM stations?

—Could development of FM network programming help serve the interests of disparate communities at the national, regional and local levels?

These questions, and the earlier denials of the four FM licence applications, give some idea of the thinking the CRTC has been doing about FM. After the Montreal hearing, the commission is expected to come up with a new and detailed policy statement on the whole FM field.

Printers, Oldest Trade Union in B.C.

By DON VIPOND

Eighty-five years ago a handful of Victoria printers gathered at St. James Hall to organize what was to become Local 201 of the International Typographical Union.

Old records suggest the local sprang from a printers' union formed in 1863. Any way you look at it, ITU Local 201 stands as the oldest trade union in B.C. Its charter is dated June 2, 1884, precisely a week before the first edition of the Victoria Daily Times was published.

Excerpts from an article, "In Retrospect," by James S. Stewart, a long-time member of Local 201, catch the flavor of the union's struggle over most of a century for working conditions most employees take for granted today.

First reference to the fight for an eight-hour day, for example, is dated 1890 and shows the ITU had a hand in establishing a local Trades and Labor Assembly, forerunner of today's Victoria Labour Council.

In 1905 came the first collection for the ITU defence fund, a quarter of one per cent of wages. But at the same time the union introduced a 10 per cent assessment to finance the battle for the eight-hour work day.

It was another five years before labor got a chance to endorse an eight-hour day bill before the Commons and not until 1933 that the five-day week became an accomplished fact.

Anyone long in the labor movement can verify union work is a long-haul proposition, a constant struggle to break new ground in the face of frustrating delays, uncertainties and frequently boredom. It takes a special kind of dedication, as the ITU Local's record of the 35-year struggle for better hours proves.

But Stewart's research shows there were some lighter moments along the way.

In 1888, the records he probed show that a notice of motion to fine members attending union meetings slightly "lit up" was defeated.

Another of the more intriguing historical notes: In 1901 the union levied a $5 fine against members who failed to show up for the Labor Day parade.

There is no explanation why the local's financial secretary had his salary reduced from $5 to $2.50 in 1885. But he did. A brighter note is sounded in an item dated 1927—the secretary got an office telephone.

Purchasing power of the dollar dwindling as it does, wage comparisons can be deceptive. But Stewart's article notes that when the Times installed four linotype machines in 1893, apprentices got $15 a week, rising to $24, and journeymen got $4 for an eight-hour day.

Journeymen printers working the day shift at Victoria Press today get $159 for a 37½-hour week.

In 1894 the membership assessment was 25 cents a month, levied "to keep the union out of the red."

Stewart pays tribute to many of 201's veterans, among them the late James F. Hough, former president and an executive member almost continuously from 1929 to 1960.

While the ITU celebrates its 117th anniversary at its upcoming convention in Seattle this year, it also marks the centennial of Canadian affiliation.

About 1,200 delegates are expected at the convention, Aug. 2 to 9 and on Aug. 3, Local 201 hosts a "Cruise to Canada Day." President Tom Ferris says 800 delegates are expected to visit Victoria and will join in a luncheon at the Empress.

PLEA MADE FOR SIRHAN

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — Arthur Goldberg, former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said Wednesday night he has asked Gov. Ronald Reagan of California to spare the life of Sirhan Sirhan, convicted assassin of Senator Robert Kennedy.

Goldberg said he made the plea for clemency in a letter sent Wednesday to the California governor.

Goldberg made the announcement as he accepted the national leadership award of the Baltimore Talmudical Academy.

LARGE CUTBACK LIKELY IN U.S. FOREIGN AID

WASHINGTON (CP)—President Nixon's request to the United States Congress on Wednesday for a $2,600,000,000 foreign aid program has been received coolly enough to indicate it faces major surgery.

Congressional resistance against continued high spending in traditionally favored enterprises such as defence is running strongly. It even confronts the space program despite the latest moonshot triumph that enhances United States prospects for landing men on the moon in July.

Congressional disenchantment with 20 years of foreign aid spending showed dramatically last year when the requested program was halved to $1,200,000,000. This year may be no different.

CITY SUFFERS SMOG TREATMENT

It looks grim, it smells rank, it tastes foul and it's called smog.

Victoria got the full treatment this morning.

Every chimney, incinerator, exhaust pipe and garbage heap was contributing its fumes.

Office windows were closed, air conditioners were shut off, cars in the Gorge area looked almost fogged-in, eyes were blinking tears.

Deputy Fire Chief Carl Coates said "It's what we call quite a heavy atmosphere."

Weatherman Alan McQuarrie at Victoria Airport explained that the city was getting a small taste of a phenomenon called "inversion."

To begin with, the air is saturated to 100 per cent humidity. A light southwest breeze is just sufficient to move the smoke and other fumes around.

A high front, moving in from the southwest, is carrying clouds that are squeezing down over the city—all the smoke that normally sails up and away is just hanging low.

McQuarrie noted that the breeze should pick up and the front continue to move, clearing the air by evening.

Berry Harvest Faces Trouble

A bumper crop of strawberries on the Saanich Peninsula is on the verge of ripening but a shortage of pickers and a bus strike could hamper harvesting.

"I've never seen the blossoms so heavy or the fruit forming so thick," Dixon Holloway, president of the Saanich Fruit Growers' Association, said today.

He said the need for pickers would begin in earnest Monday and probably 500 would be required at the peak of the crop in mid-June.

"There are not enough pickers in sight at the moment but we're optimistic when people see the berries on the market they'll get the idea and turn out for picking," he added.

BUS PROBLEM

Getting the pickers to the 60 or 70 acres of strawberries on the peninsula is a problem this year because of the 21-day-old strike at Vancouver Island Coach Lines.

Growers have lined up two independent buses which they hope will handle the job until the strike ends. But 12 buses were used last year at the peak of the season.

Hiring pickers is co-ordinated by the local Manpower office and people wanting work are asked to phone the farm labor section at 385-6711. Fruit farmers phone in their requests for labor to the same section.

Holloway said the suggested minimum pay rates for pickers are the same as last year, 75 cents for the 12-pint boxes that make up a crate for the fresh fruit market and 60 cents for 12 pounds of strawberries picked for processing.

HEALTHFUL

Most of the pickers are young people. A good picker can average $5 a day through the season, he said, with some earning as much as $12 a day.

"It's a little hard on the back until you get broken in—but very healthful."

Holloway said a harsh winter hit the strawberry crop hard on the mainland with frost killing many plants.

"We were very fortunate on the peninsula to have the snow cover before the frost came."

The strawberry season lasts six to seven weeks and loganberries, ripe early in July usually, extend the picking season through the rest of the summer.

20-Cent Coffee By Midsummer Says Caterer

By MARJORIE PARKER

Bad news for coffee drinkers.

F. M. Peace, assistant catering manager Sidney Travelodge, predicts that by midsummer, the price of a single cup of coffee in Victoria will be 20 cents.

He explained that the restaurant industry cannot absorb the increased overhead attributable to spiralling food and labor costs.

Beef prices have risen 20 per cent in the past two weeks and wholesale pastry prices by 13 per cent.

So a participant in the coffee break club, an accepted priviledge of the labor force, will have to shell out another $25 a year for his beverage.

Figure it out; two cups of coffee a day, five working days a week, 50 working weeks a year. An increase of five cents a cup: 2 times 5 times 50 equals $25 by either the old or the new maths.

Two Men Arrested In Stabbing

City police have arrested two men in connection with the early Tuesday morning stabbing of a University of Victoria student.

George F. Wright, 19, and Hector Joseph Guilmette, 21, both of CFB Esquimalt, are charged with theft of an automobile. Guilmette is also charged with wounding with the intent to cause bodily harm.

Police said the men were taken into custody this morning and were to appear in central court later today.

About 4 a.m. Tuesday Orville James Brown, 23, of 3240 Harriet, was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital with a single stomach wound. He is in fair condition today.

Wright and Guilmette suffered minor injuries in a car accident before 6 a.m. Tuesday.

Private Cars Take Priority On Stretched Ferry

Private cars will have priority over larger vehicles when Queen of Esquimalt goes back to work June 13.

The ferry has been "stretched to increase her car accommodation from 142 to 192 and to maitain schedules her loading and unloading time must be cut to a mininum.

For that reason, according to B.C. Ferry authorities, Queen of Esquimalt will load private cars first, along with buses.

If space and time permits, campers, house trailers and mobile homes will have a secondary priority. Commercial vehicles and trucks will have no priority. They should not be scheduled for this ferry.

The system will prevail between June 13 and September 22 on Queen of Esquimalt sailings from Swartz Bay daily at 8 a.m., noon and 4 and 8 p.m.

CHRISTOPHER PAUL . . . "feels nature"

Birds Are Singing A Camping Holiday For July, August

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Squehal Haewa-ah.

These two Indian words should gladden the hearts of many people planning on taking their holidays in July and August.

Translated into English by Christopher Paul, 75-year-old member of the Tsartlip (Brentwood) band, it means Vancouver Island is going to get camping days this summer.

He made the prediction today after observing signs of nature and activities of birds.

"When blue camass grows profusely and the birds are a little late in raising their young — as they are this year—it usually means we are in for a hot, sunny summer," he said.

But the month of June, he said, would be a mixture of clouds, rain and sun.

"We will get some hot days in June," he said, "but the long sunny periods will start when the moon is full on June 29."

Paul also said it would be a good growing season.

He noted roots of some wild plants, once used widely as a source of food by Indians, were growing profusely this year.

"I have never seen so many wild camass in flower," he said. "This means a good growing season."

He said it was easy to tell what the weather was going to be from day to day, but quite a different matter to make a long-range forecast.

"When the birds twitter and chatter a lot or the wind is blowing south and southeast, you know that rain is not far off. But to make a long range forecast you not only have to observe nature, but feel it."

To feel nature, he explained, requires the use of all six senses and a deep understanding for all living things.

"Most people today just see things—they travel to see things, but they don't feel."

Paul who spends most of his days outside in his garden, returned to his weeding.

"Squehal Haewa-ah," he took up his hoe. "Good camping days to you."

'KID GLOVE' TREATMENT FOR ART

The National Gallery of Canada is taking no chances with a $200,000 Flemish masterpiece, now on display at the Greater Victoria Art Gallery.

The huge canvas, "As the Old Sing, So the Young Twitter" by 17th century master Jacob Jordaens, is being carried on a cross-Canada tour by a special truck.

The truck is designed to minimize the drastic temperature differences in different areas of Canada, with special humidity and temperature controls.

The galleries at which the painting will be on view also have special temperature and humidity controls as well as electronic guarding systems.

"We have a special guarding system in the Victoria gallery because some of our own collection are in the $100,000 range," explained gallery director Colin Graham, today.

THEFT UNLIKELY

"There's little danger of a painting this large and this well-known being stolen," added Graham.

The painting, completed about 1640, measures eight feet by five feet.

It is an oil on canvas depicting the celebration of the Epiphany. The title is a Flemish saying, meaning that the young imitate the follies of their elders.

Jordaens himself is identified as the jester on the painting. His wife Catharina is believed to be one of the subjects.

The painting was described by a Berlin gallery director in 1854 who wrote "size and richness of composition, solid execution and power of color, render this one of the best examples of a subject so often treated by him."

SHORT VISIT

The painting will be on view in Victoria until June 8. It will then be taken to the Vancouver gallery.

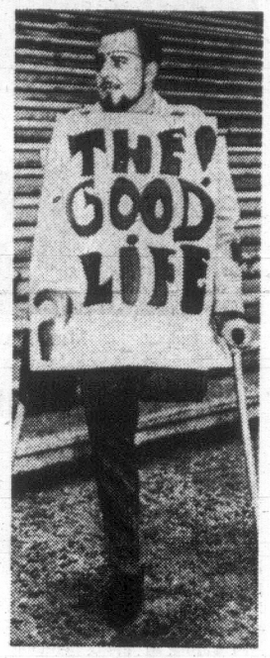
The public can view the masterpiece Tuesday through Saturday between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m.; Sunday between 2 and 5 p.m. and Thursday between 7:30 and 9:30 p.m.

Several Hurt In Accident Involving Bus

Several persons were taken to St. Joseph's Hospital shortly before noon today after an accident involving a B.C. Hydro bus at Douglas and Pembroke.

A hospital spokesman said all were in satisfactory condition. Exact number of injured was not known at press time.

No details were immediately available from police who were out at a number of less serious crashes.



ROBERT ADAMS
. . . leg promised

Wooden Leg All He Wants For Good Life

Premier Bennett, just back from 3,300 miles of driving the province's roads, today told reporters he found British Columbians everwhere are enjoying the good life.

But he must have shut his eyes when his car suddenly swerved in the Legislative Building driveway minutes earlier as he arrived at his office.

A one-legged, one-eyed young steamfitter from Parksville apparently caused the swerve.

He was parading, on crutches, with a sandwich-board poster announcing "The Good Life?"

Bennett didn't stop and ask the demonstrator about his complaint before entering the building where he gave his report to the reporters.

If he had, this is what 26-year-old Robert Danny Adams would have told him.

"I come from Victoria although I now live in Parksville.

"In June of 1967, I was smashed up in a serious auto accident in New York state.

"That September I came back to B.C. and by October, although I didn't want to, I was forced to go on welfare because I still couldn't work. I need a wooden leg which was promised by the welfare people.

"I've got a good trade and I could go back to work if I could walk again. They've been telling me to wait; to be paitient.

"Finally I wrote (Social Welfare Minister Dan) Campbell.

"He wrote back saying that I would get my leg in three weeks.

"That was six weeks and three days ago so I decided I had to do something.

"So I've come down here for the day to try to get some attention for my case."

Not Just Saturna Will Be Affected

By PETE LOUDON

The fate of Saturna Island Free School—with its 21 pupils, four horses, chickens, rabbits, goats, dogs, cats and eight guitars—has been determined by the Metropolitan Health Board.

Senior medical officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread checked the school Tuesday.

"I know what action we're taking.

"When we take it depends on when we get advice," he said today.

He said letters seeking this advice have gone to British Columbia ministers of education, health and welfare.

"This isn't just a matter of the Saturna Free School," the doctor said ominously. And that's all he would say.

To Tom Durrie, the school's organizer, and his staff of five and his covey of nature children, the words doomed the school.

The dream which Tom Durrie now sees fading, began in 1960 when he was 29 and winding up three years as a teacher in California in his native U.S.A.

He and his wife Gretel, Miles, 11, and Emily, 9, struck out for Canada seeking space and land. It was an impulse born of dissatisfaction with prescribed forms of learning.

He taught seven years in B.C., at Burnaby, Hazleton and Williams Lake, before deciding that the B.C. curricula were no more rewarding than those of California. He took a job as director of The New School In Vancouver—a parent-owned co-operative school which ended in a philosophical disagreement.

"Their ideas were liberal—mine were radical," he recalls. He brought four pupils and three staff members to Saturna to open a revolutionary free school based on his own philosophy of learning.

Staff includes Lyn Bowman, Rini House, Bill Sheffeld, John Laing (who is getting his degree in education at UBC today) and Gretel.

20 Registered, More Applied

That was last summer. They had 20 students registered by September and many more applications.

Seventeen sets of parents represented by the 21 children aged six to 16 live in Vancouver mostly—but others are in the U.S. and Mexico and Canadian centres such as Saskatoon and Montreal. Eleven of the 17 sets of parents depend on teaching for their livelihoods.

"They sent their children here because they believe in a free education, not prescribed but following the child's directions and needs.

"We work on the assumption that man is a learning individual by nature."

There are no grades, no marks, no government exams, no jurisdiction by the department of education (the latter being true of all private schools).

"Some of the older ones elect to work toward a high school diploma. If he needs that piece of paper, he can get it." Tom says when a youngster finds he needs formal education, that is the time to get it. When he reaches that decision he learns much faster.

In the meantime, he claims the free school pupil learns by living.

"We start with the interest the child brings with him, proceed with what they want to do.

"The younger ones learn arithmetic when they want to handle change or put things together." They learn to read because they want to recognize their names and share in the fun of the school paper.

The kids who go fishing learn biology and anatomy in the gutting process. Two youngsters applied a battery to a fish's heart recently and made it pulse again, he says.

Orders Seldom Heard at School

They learn their English in the process of letter-writing—because they want to communicate—not because they are ordered to write an essay.

Orders are seldom heard at the free school. Decisions are made by group discussion. The older boy who ducked a younger one and frightened him during a swim session evoked a general discussion on relationships between weak and strong. Tom felt it taught him more than any punishment.

Free schools aren't new—there are two in Victoria—and elsewhere in B.C. there are more. Some have collapsed. Some thrive. What they accomplish isn't the nitty gritty of the story of the Saturna School.

The problem area here is that the school is located in a large rambling farmhouse built by pioneer Gerald Payne on Payne Road about 1890.

It was sagging and dilapidated when Tom took over. He and his staff renovated it as best they could (with their academic leanings).

They put in an electric stove to bolster the wood range, installed toilets, showers and bedrooms and dormitories with triple-decker wood frame beds.

The visitor sees children and their natural litter everywhere. Treasured artwork colors the walls. One may hear simultaneously, a flute, a clarinet, a piano, an electric organ, a tape recorder and a television.

The kids and the staff often affect the abandoned appearance and long hair of the individualist square society calls "hippie."

The staff has reason to be casual in dress.

"None of us are salaried. All that comes in (tuition fees) goes into the school." The staff gets its basic needs and room and board.

Villagers have been kind, says Tom. But it's easy to imagine some might resent kids who are undisciplined, who don't conform, who dress strangely, who wear long hair, who call their teacher "Dewey."

Situations like that seem to invite demands on authority to "close them down", "run them out." (Cool Aid people here can tell you about that.)

Dr. Whitbread hasn't said whether his personal interest in the Saturna Free School was fired by complaints against it.

Tom says that health inspector Daryl Anderson had been out a number of times without causing any concern about the school's sanitation.

"Then out of the blue Dr. Whitbread appeared. The house was messy that day and needed picking up." Next came press stories that unless "drastic steps" were taken at the school it faced closure.

A letter from the doctor was less explosive than the accounts of the Metro health board meeting.

"It asked for kitchen renovations, proper furniture and bedding and extensive cleaning by May 20. Presumably his visit Tuesday was to check up on that."

There's only so much can be done to modernize a 79-year-old house. A saving grace may be that at least the kids spend as much time outside as they do inside. And Saturna air has it all over city air.

Was this reporter appalled by the conditions? Hardly. He's seen too many homes in Victoria occupied by low income families, which are in much worse condition due to circumstances the residents can't alter.

BIGGEST ARMADA GATHERING IN INNER HARBOR

164 Yachts Will Answer Swiftsure Roll Call

The invasion has begun. The first vanguard of the biggest armada of yachts to gather at the Inner Harbor is already tied alongside, waiting for Saturday and the beginning of the annual Swiftsure and Juan de Fuca classics.

Spectators along Dallas Road will see 164 yachts make their way to the start line Saturday morning. Swiftsure entries number 103 while 38 smaller boats are entered in Juan de Fuca.

In addition 12 Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet boats will be sailing the Swiftsure course in a race of their own, beginning with Swiftsure yachts at 9:30 a.m.

Eleven PHRF boats will start at 9:45 a.m. with the Juan de Fuca competitors sailing their own race to Clallam Bay and back.

STARTING LINE

HMCS Cowichan and HMCS Miramichi will form the start line with the starting signals being fired aboard HMCS Cowichan.

The two courses, 136 and 76 miles respectively, will be patrolled by the two navy vessels, supplemented by HMCS Porte de la Reine, HMCS Porte Quebec and the United States coastguard vessel Point Countess from Port Angeles.

Swiftsure boats will round HMCS Miramichi at the outward station while the Royal Canadian Mounted Police's Victoria will act as rounding mark in Clallam Bay for Juan de Fuca racers.

Many Swiftsure veterans will be here to pit their skills against the strongest tides of the year in the race acknowledged as the Pacific Northwest's toughest.

MAUI COMPETITORS

Among them are H. L. Kotkins' Diamond Head, John Long's Mary Bower, K. W. Browne's Norwester and the navy's ketch, HMCS Oriole, skippered by Geoff Hilliard.

Several of those that competed in the race from Victoria to Maui will be competing, including Bill Killam's Porpoise 111, which won the race.

One Victoria-Maui veteran favored to do well because of her light-displacement and speed is Don Lawson's Cubara of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

Other Maui contenders in this weekend's sailout are Mary Bower, D. D. Nielsen's Moonglow III, Paul Cote's Jeunesse and another RVYC entry, Dave Angus' Tiffany.

Swiftsure fever will reach a peak Friday afternoon as HMCS Cowichan and HMCS Miramichi steam into the Inner Harbor to join the festivities.

FOREST OF SPARS

Fender to fender, and signal flags flying in a kaleidoscope of color from a forest of spars, yachts and their crews will stand by, waiting for the roll call, to begin at 7:50 p.m.

Humphrey Golby will read the roll call from HMCS Cowichan. On completion of the ceremony, acting mayor Ald. Clyde Savage will welcome the visiting yachtsmen.

Adding its own contribution to the evening, the Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps will perform a sunset ceremony on the lawns of the Legislative Buildings.

A series of films on sailing will also be presented at the Provincial Museum.

50-HOUR LIMIT

Throughout the race, which has a 50-hour time limit for the first boat, and a 74-hour time limit for all competitors, officials will plot the course of each yacht, relaying information from escort vessels and patrolling planes.

Those waiting ashore will be able to keep an up-to-date check through a master chart in a window at Eaton's which will be manned by officials on a round-the-clock basis.

MEAN TIDE LURKS AT RACE ROCKS

Strategy and good navigators will be at a premium this weekend when Swiftsure and Juan de Fuca sailors contend with some of the meanest tides in the classics' history.

Shortly before the race begins at 9:30 a.m. Saturday off Brotchie Ledge, a strong flood tide will find the yachts beating their way to Race Rocks with a 2-time limit of about 1½ hours before full flood challenges them with an adverse five or six knots' pull at the Race.

Humphrey Golby, 'Mr. Swifsture' in racing circles, predicts that "unless they get brisk winds . . . 10 knots or more . . . the fleet can be really separated at this point with the advantage going to the light-displacement faster boats."

Timing will be the deciding factor again at the outward marks of Swiftsure and Clallam Bay, turning mark for the smaller Juan de Fuca entries.

With a strong ebb tide running almost all night those yachts still ghosting their way up the Strait may be stymied by the usual lack of wind during those hours.

Skippers and crews of the 164 entries are praying that strong winds will be their allies in their fight against the adverse tide conditions.

As a safety precaution many yachts are taking on extra anchor lines so as to be able to wait out the tide if necessary.

Apartment Traded For Cosy Cottage

By PENNY SAVER

When we heard that our friends Ike and Janet had bought a house, we insisted they take us out to see it. To our surprise the place was scarcely more than a cottage, although set on a beautiful piece of land. "It's no larger than your apartment," I protested. "Ah, but we can make noise whenever we like," replied Janet. A few weeks later we were invited out to their new house for a mini-house-warmth. It Janet was taking herself at her own word. When we arrived she was banging away on her new electric piano, playing, of all things, pieces from the Fitzwilliam Virginal Book. "I haven't had so much fun in years," she gurgled. "One has to be much more precise on this than on a real piano because it works like a harpsichord with tuned metal reeds being plucked and the vibrations being transmitted and amplified like those from an electric guitar string. Hit the key wrong and no noise comes out." At this point I began to hover on the edge of a very rude yawn, so Janet quickly changed the subject and began to show me round the house.

Ike and Janet always made their apartment look out of the ordinary and they are gradually doing the same with their house. I was let in on all the planned renovations and shown Janet's solution to the problem of attractive, yet inexpensive, lamp coverings. "These had just arrived in town when I went looking," she explained pulling a handful of envelopes out of a drawer. "They range between $4.95 and $6.95 and come in four different designs. I love them." These lamp shades are made of heavy paper and plastic and must, therefore, be kept far enough away from the bulb that they won't catch fire from the heat. They come in plain colors of yellow, orange or white as well as combinations of colors. Easy to assemble, they present a sculptured appearance. The one Janet had made already was all white with some parts curving out, others in, making a basketwork effect and creating interesting shadows.

Colorful Wastebaskets

Wastebaskets are terribly necessary, if only as a focal point for the paper garbage that misses the mark, but they can also be terribly dull. Ike and Janet like everything they have to look nice and fit into the color scheme of the room so they decided to buy decidedly un-dull wastebaskets made of strips of woven bamboo. These baskets are available in either round or oval shapes and come in a wide range of colors including pink, yellow, green and natural. They also come in four sizes at $1.50, $2.25, $2.55 and $2.95. These baskets could also be used for storing mending you haven't had time to do, or for sewing materials and patterns and so forth.

The one trouble with bamboo wastebaskets is that they are far from fireproof. If you would like an undull wastebasket that can take a small, accidental fire standing up why not get one that displays the Union Jack. wastebaskets are $1.99 each. Do keep your wastebasket fires Jack imports from Britain that includes trays, mugs and dishtowels. Made of enamelled metal, these Union Jack wastebaskets are $1.99 each. To keep your wastebasket fires to a minimum, however, I really don't think the enamel would take the flames without getting cracked, and fires of any sort have a habit of getting out of hand.

DEAR ABBY . . .

A Salesman's Wife Laments

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Not only does my salesman husband fly to exotic places for conventions, he is also expected (when in town) to wine and dine prospects nearly every evening until the wee hours.

Weekends are a nightmare. He's exhausted and sleeps every Saturday morning, plus all afternoon on Sunday. Meanwhile I'm supposed to keep our four hyperactive youngsters quiet and out of sight.

I'll stay until the youngsters are old enough, so I can get out with a clear conscience, and leave him alone to the "death of a salesman." Sincerely, Waiting

DEAR WAITING: Have you tried to make your husband aware of what is happening to your marriage? If not, you must accept part of the blame for its failure.

DEAR ABBY: I, too, have an answer to the lady, married for 21 years who boasted that she phoned her hubby every day at work to say, "I love you."

"Mush" is strictly a breakfast food. Served piping hot at 6 to 7 a.m. with several cups of steaming coffee, it is better than served "strained" through a phone wire every day for 21 years.

Could she be trying to appease her guilty conscience because the "you" of "I love you" has been grabbing a quick cup of coffee and a day-old doughnut every morning at the corner cafe?—Naomi in Medford.

DEAR NAOMI: Could be. But not necessarily.

DEAR ABBY: I have a real big crush on a boy in one of my classes at school, but he doesn't seem to have very much to say to me, although he sure stares at me a lot when he doesn't think I know it. He spoke to me once in the hall last week when he called the purse I was carrying a "fish basket."

How can I let him know I would like to know him better? I don't want to be too pushy. We are both 15.—Likes Kevin.

DEAR LIKES: You'll need a little co-operation. Get one of your girl friends to tell one of Kevin's boy friends that the girl with the "fish basket" is in the market for a live one.

Predicts Increase

TORONTO (CP) — Barbara Toth, a professional chef for a fraternity house here, says she thinks more and more women will be breaking into the occupation.

Miss Toth said in an interview that "in many ways we work better than men—I honestly think we're cleaner and tidier and we're certainly more imaginative about using leftovers."

Cats Who Eat House Plants Have Higher Mortality Rate

TORONTO (CP) —A handsome little Siamese cat sits alone in a small house. His name is Sebastian, and his owner is away at work all day. He is 15 months old, still playful as a kitten, and a bit lonely.

Sebastian starts to play with the leaves of a plant, then nibbles at one. It doesn't taste pleasant, but it's something to do so he keeps chewing at it, playing with the leaves and nibbling a bit more.

Poor Sebastian—the beautiful plant was a dieffenbachia, with bright green leaves mottled with paler green and white streaks. It is one of the most popular house plants in North America, but to a little cat, it's as deadly as cyanide when eaten. Sebastian died three days later, despite emergency medical care and every resource of modern veterinary practice.

Dr. Robert C. Williams of Brampton, Ont., the veterinarian who tried to save Sebastian, says such deaths occur too often.

"The number of deaths among cats eating house plants is very high. Another popular house plant, the philodendron with leaves shaped like elephant ears is, like dieffenbachia, one of the deadliest killers if it is eaten. In one research report, out of 72 cases of philodendron poisoning in cats, 37 deaths resulted. Symptoms were debilitation and listlessness, with complete destruction of kidney function. There was no apparent pain, just loss of interest in living.

"Pine needles are another source of poison and danger for cats. When a cat eats them, the results are usually fatal."

If you have a pet cat and house plants, you should be sure all the plants are out of reach. Don't forget cats can easily jump to the top of a mantel. If your cat is addicted to chewing plants, you may have to make a choice between cat and plants.

If you do find him playing with them, check to see how much he has eaten, and get him to a veterinarian quickly. Emergency first-aid treatment for most poisons, if it can be given within 10 minutes of the poisoning, is two teaspoons of milk of magnesia or epsom salts in a little warm water. Or put a teaspoon of salt on the back of the cat's tongue to make him throw up.

If he is comatose, don't waste time or injure him further with first aid. Wrap him up and rush him to the veterinarian. Take along a sample of what he has eaten.

Poisoning can also be caused by some common household cleaning solutions. Phenol poisoning can result if you wash the cat's litter pan or the kitchen floors with anything containing carbolic acid, creolin, creosote or lysol. These ingredients are found in many disinfectants, so read labels carefully and rinse well if you use one of the cleaners.

A tin of anti-freeze, even a few drops of ethylene glycol, can be fatal. Cats love its taste.

Both cats and dogs often eat grass, so you should not spray it with poisonous solutions. Bulbs, peach pits and apricot kernels can poison pets and children, and peach leaves contain cyanide.

You should be cautious about plants you bring into your home to make into dried arrangements for winter. Unidentified weeds may carry berries or seed pods that are poisonous. Holly and Jerusalem cherry berries are poisonous, and so are the green berries from mistletoe.

Clubwomen's News

Unify UCW — Rev. R. J. Morris, guest speaker at a recent meeting of the Victoria United Church Women Presbyterial told members that the national board of women in the church will be integrated with five existing boards in Toronto. He said this will happen within two years and will bring the church's work under one umbrella. He said the integration won't affect women's groups in local churches but will mean a saving of manpower at the national level. Delegates to the recent Conference on Congregational Life in Naramata also spoke.

Big Canadian Pitch at Paris Airshow

By CY FOX

PARIS (CP) — Canada's biggest-ever participation in the Paris Air Show, a feature of the 1969 version which opened today, reflects increased Canadian efforts to promote stronger commercial ties in France as well as in Europe and the world generally.

The air show's Canadian pavilion, featuring 28 exhibitors, already has won a place, along with displays by the United States, the Soviet Union, France and Britain, among highlights of the big exposition.

With the Black Brant rocket and models of scientific and communications satellites a major drawing card, the Canadians say they are out to assert their aerospace prowess against tough commercial competition from similar industries in other parts of the world.

The brash new effort could arouse warm response in France, where business interest in Canada has increased significantly in recent years.

Paradoxically, some of the credit for this seems due to a 1967 event which set off a storm of argument, especially in English-speaking Canada—the visit of then-president de Gaulle to Quebec.

An official at the Chambre de Commerce France-Canada, which seeks to promote closer commercial bonds between the two countries, said Wednesday the number of trade inquiries received by that organization from French businessmen rose greatly after the general's trip.

Canadian immigration officials in France had the same experience after the de Gaulle voyage, which gave Canada the sort of publicity in France that public relations men dream about.

'WIPE OUT' SOVIET UNION CHINA THREAT

HONG KONG (AFP) — China has threatened to "wipe out" the Soviet Union if it initiates any war against the Chinese people.

It accused the Soviet Union of shelling Chinese border territory incessantly since March 29 and said the Soviet Union is pursuing a policy of "nuclear blackmail" to win her territorial claims.

Police Slaying Accidental

TORONTO (CP) — A coroner's jury ruled Wednesday night that Angelo Nobrega, 20, was shot and killed accidentally and exonerated Detective Kevin Boyd in the May 4 incident.

The youth was shot in the head by the detective following an early-morning car chase.

Coroner John Porter instructed the jury of three men and two women to rule whether Detective Boyd had pulled the trigger of his .32-calibre revolver accidentally or deliberately. The youth's two brothers said Detective Boyd had shot Nobrega deliberately.

Detective Boyd and his partner, Detective James Sugden, wanted to stop the car in connection with a break-in at a movie theatre.

Nobrega ignored orders to stop and the car was later found, parked in a service station lot. Jose fled from the car and jumped over a fence, but was apprehended by Detective Sugden.

The jury was told that Detective Boyd told the other two youths to get ou of he car.

Detective Boyd said as Angelo got out of the car, he was pushed, fell backwards and the gun discharged.

What you need to know to choose the right sanitary napkin

by Anne Gilbert

MODESS napkins come in three different shapes: tapered, deep-tapered, and regular. An expert explains how to choose the one that will end your worries about sanitary napkin accidents forever.

The three different Modess napkins are tapered, deep-tapered, and regular-shaped. Now every woman can choose the one she's sure will fit her needs best.

Modess napkins protect you with a moisture-proof polyethylene shield. Stains can't happen. (A-line dress by Miss Sun Valley.)

CHOOSING a sanitary napkin is a whole lot more complicated than it used to be.

You don't hurry into your favourite lingerie shop, and buy the first bra you see. Well, neither do you buy the first box of napkins you see. If you do, you stand a good chance of choosing a napkin that will be perfect for your next door neighbour but won't fit you at all.

Take the time to find the best fit

Napkins that fit? Definitely! Now that napkins come in different shapes and sizes, you can find one that fits you. What's more you should.

A napkin that fits can't slip. And if it can't slip, it won't chafe or bulge.

A napkin that fits won't leak. It won't curl along the edges so that your lingerie is stained every day of your period.

It's shape that really counts

Fit is determined by the shape of the napkin. That's why Modess napkins come in three different shapes: two tapered and one regular.

A tapered napkin is shaped: wide in front and narrow in back. It's designed to follow your body contours, and so fit snugly.

A regular-shaped napkin is rectangular, but slightly moulded at both ends. This is the original napkin, and many women find it provides the best fit.

Descriptions of the three different Modess napkins are coming. But first let's look at three factors common to every Modess napkin. While they don't affect your choice of one napkin over the other, each is a major reason why Modess napkins can promise security.

Moisture-proof protection

Every Modess napkin has a thin, flat sheet of moisture-proof polyethylene stretched the full length and width of the napkin. In the tapered napkins this sheet, or shield, lies flat between layers of absorbent fluff filling. In the regular-shaped napkin it's actually bonded to the outside.

This polyethylene shield is absolutely moisture-proof. The menstrual flow can never leak through a Modess napkin.

The Modess napkin personal fit is essential in pant suits like this by Miss Sun Valley. Choose the napkin shaped for you and never worry about tell-tale bulges again.

Fast absorbency means maximum comfort

Every Modess napkin is wrapped in a soft, perforated cover. These perforations actually speed up absorbency. The menstrual flow is drawn through them into the centre of the napkin where it is dispersed. And the napkin cover stays relatively dry. It retains the soft comfort it had when you first put it on.

Concern with hygiene

A third feature common to every Modess napkin is hygiene. Modess napkins are made by Johnson & Johnson. For years this company has manufactured hospital and baby products, so that hygienic conditions are the rule throughout its plants. It's nice to know that such care is taken in the production of something as personal as your sanitary napkin.

Now, back to the choice of a napkin shape for you. Remember, that while shape is what determines fit, there are also other napkin differences which you should consider before making your final choice.

MODESS CAREFREE Feminine Napkins

The Carefree napkin was designed especially for younger women. This doesn't mean you can't wear it if you're over thirty. But means it's tapered to fit a youthful figure and to absorb a regular flow. The Modess moisture-proof polyethylene shield stretches full-length and full-width through the centre of each Carefree napkin.

MODESS SOFF-FORM Feminine Napkins

The Soff-Form napkin is deep-tapered. Extra depth makes it super absorbent. If your flow is exceptionally heavy, and a tapered napkin fits you best, this is the napkin for you. The moisture-proof polyethylene shield is built into the centre of this napkin too.

In each box of Soff-Form napkins you get a free supply of blue, opaque, plastic sanitary envelopes. These are ideal for carrying fresh napkins and disposing of used ones. If you'd like some, why not write Johnson & Johnson? Details of this offer later.

Opaque, plastic sanitary envelopes come in every box of Modess Soff-Form napkins. They're ideal for carrying fresh napkins and disposing of used ones. (Purse by Miss Hort.)

MODESS Regular Feminine Napkins

The Regular napkin follows the standard rectangular shape, and is designed for a regular flow. This is the Modess napkin with the unique protective shield, called the "boat" shield. It extends across the bottom and part way up the sides (see dark line on cross-section above). If you have a problem with leaking or staining, consider this napkin seriously. It gives the extra protection no other napkin can.

Maybe now you know enough about Modess napkins to choose the best one for you. If not, try them all. Start with the one that you think will suit you best, just the way you do when you try on a bra.

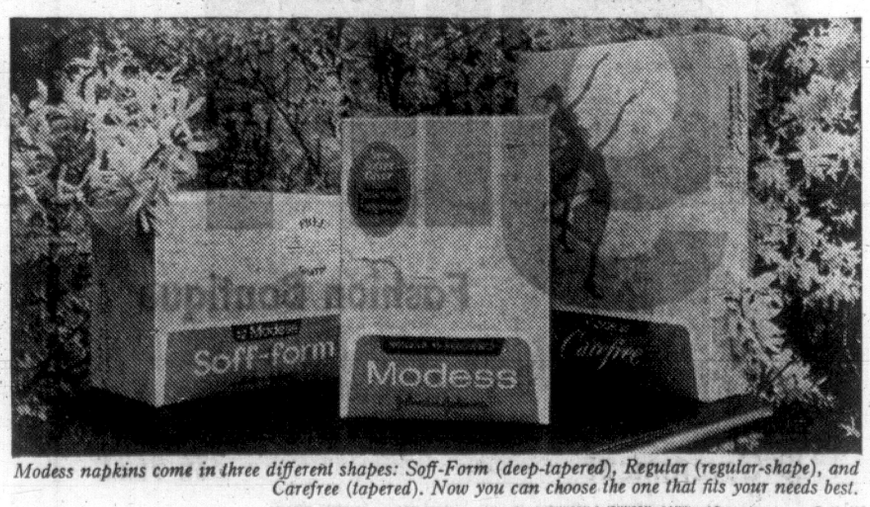
You'll find once you've the best fit for you, that your napkin will be a whole lot easier to forget. You won't feel it, and you won't worry about it. And when you think about it, that's what a napkin should be: reliable enough to forget.

Special Offer

We would like to send you a supply of the sanitary envelopes that are packed into every Soff-Form napkin box. Just send 25– along with your name, address, and a box top from whatever box of napkins you have in the house now. We don't care what brand it is.

Mail to Johnson & Johnson Limited, Special Offer, Box 6332, Montreal 101, Quebec. We'll send you four dozen of these convenient, opaque, sanitary envelopes. Use them to carry fresh napkins and dispose of used ones.

Anne Gilbert is the Director of Education at Johnson & Johnson. It's her job to know all about napkins, and to pass this knowledge on to the consumer. If at any time you have questions about Modess products write to her.



Modess napkins come in three different shapes: Soff-Form (deep-tapered), Regular (regular-shape), and Carefree (tapered). Now you can choose the one that fits your needs best.

Drug Bill Moves Through Senate

OTTAWA (CP)—A government bill to increase price competition for prescription drugs was approved without amendment behind closed doors by the Senate commerce committee Wednesday.

Senator Salter Hayden (L—Ontario), committee chairman, said after the closed meeting that the bill had received approval subject to reading into committee minutes certain assurances from the health department's food and drug directorate.

The bill, which has been passed in the Commons and now needs only Senate third reading and royal assent, would enable the government to grant licences to permit manufacture of patented prescription drugs by companies which do not have the patent.

The government would also have the power to allow companies to import competitive trade-mark drugs.

The bill is designed to permit greater competition and thus bring about lower prices for prescription drugs.

Several senators spoke against the bill in earlier meetings on the grounds that it did not contain sufficient safeguards against the production or importing of substandard imitations of the original patent.

R. A. Champman, head of the federal food and drug directorate, said one of the assurances given is that drugs produced by manufacturers given access to another company's patent will be subject to stricter scrutiny and more rigid testing than ordinary prescription drugs for sale.

NATIONAL president John J. Neidhart will attend closing banquet here Tuesday of annual meeting of Pacific Northwest region of the Illuminating Engineering Society. The engineers, who are the professional authority for approved lighting standards in U.S. and Canada, will discuss lighting in gymnasiums and classrooms during the three-day meeting.

Defence Row Faces China

HONG KONG (Reuters) — A row is developing between Mao Tse-tung and Defence Minister Lin Piao over who should command the defence of Peking should Russia invade, The Star said Wednesday.

Quoting its own sources inside China, the English-language newspaper said the row was started by an intelligence report saying Russian troops could threaten Peking within 72 hours of crossing the Sino-Soviet border.

The newspaper said Lin Piao appointed a deputy chief of general staff, Gen. Wen-Yu-chen, to command the Peking garrison in the event of an attack.

But Gen. Wang Tung-hsin, who commands the special body guard responsible for Mao's security, said he will take orders only from Mao personally.

The newspaper said Lin Piao believed Wen should be in charge of the over-all strategy of defending Peking, in the event of an attack, and not Wang.

However, though Mao and Lin disagree over who should command, they have agreed that in event of a big Russian attack they should be prepared to evacuate Peking, the newspaper reported.

IWA Backs Strike

PORTLAND (AP)—The International Woodworkers of America announced Tuesday that workers in western states have voted to authorize their negotiating committee to call a strike to back up contract demands.

The IWA and the lumber and sawmill workers union have submitted joint demands for a 50-cent hourly increase this year and eight per cent more each of the next two years.

Moose Born In Captivity At B.C. Park

KAMLOOPS (CP) — What is believed to be the first birth of a moose in captivity in British Columbia took place this week at the B.C. wildlife park, near this community 160 miles northeast of Vancouver.

The calf weighed 30 pounds, managed to get on its feet only minutes after it was born and had its first taste of milk shortly afterward.

The parents arrived at the park as young calves from different parts of B.C. almost three years ago.

Zoo director John Moelaert described the birth as the biggest event in the history of the park.

He said that efforts to keep moose in captivity rarely meet with success.

There are few zoos in the world where they can be seen and, where it had been tried, the animals seldom lived longer than a year, he said.

Militancy Cited

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — Tom Wilson, a rancher for 20 years, has resigned from the recreation and conservation committee of the British Columbia Beef Cattle Growers' Association, saying there is no more he could do because of the rising influence of a militant group of conservationists who set the policy for the B.C. Wildlife Federation. He named Arthur Downs, editor of the magazine B.C. Outdoors, as leader of the group. Wilson said the federation wants to set aside a minimum of 1,000,000 acres of land as wildlife refuge.

MONTREAL, May 29th — At last I've discovered a gift that increases in value, always fits, and is easy to mail. It's a Scotiabank Savings Certificate, ideal for office presentations, birthday gifts, wedding presents or anniversaries. It's personal, because each Scotiabank Savings Certificate is registered and can be cashed only by the owner. Best of all, when held six years, its value increases nearly 43%. Even when cashed before the six years are up, it's still worth more than when it was bought, whether it cost $7 or $700. I find Scotiabank Savings Certificates as pleasant to give as to receive. Available, of course, only at THE BANK OF NOVA SCOTIA.

IT DOESN'T SHOW in the bathroom — that's another reason I like SANI BLUE! I hang this new automatic toilet bowl cleaner in the tank, put back the lid, and the toilet keeps hygienic and fresh-smelling for about four months. I was glad to be able to tell my husband that Sani Blue is non-corrosive and non-toxic . . . amazing when you see how it cleans and deodorizes and does away with rust stains. Sani Blue costs only 98¢ at supermarkets, department stores, grocery, hardware and drugstores everywhere. It does an unpleasant job for you so pleasantly.

IT'S NEW AND IT'S NEWS! One of the most versatile products you can buy is evaporated milk and now Borden's have introduced a brand new kind. Lighter, not quite as rich, but with a more natural flavour, BORDEN'S 2% EVAPORATED PARTLY SKIMMED MILK contains only a quarter the butterfat content of regular milk. Each tablespoon contains only 14 calories. I use Borden's 2% in tea and coffee, for cooking or straight from the can for desserts. The news? Borden's 2% costs less than regular evaporated milk. So look for the blue and green striped can with the big 2% next time you're shopping. You know, if it's Borden's it's got to be good!

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Glen Campbell Success Tale Began With Western Guitar

WASHINGTON (W P) — One of the most phenomenal success stories in the music business in the last several years has been the climb to fame by singer Glen Campbell.

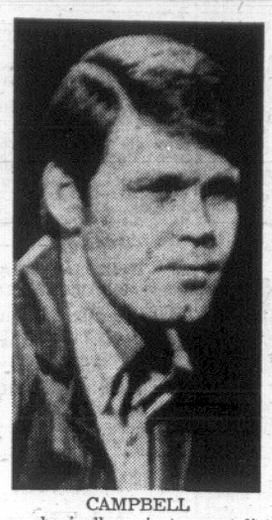
He was known first for his guitar playing, an outgrowth of his background in playing in country and western bands. His initial vocal Gentle on My Mind, a bitter-sweet song about a faraway love, almost immediately hit the million-seller mark.

The song, of course, has since been recorded by many other singers. But Campbell was first. He found the song, written by John Hartford, in Nashville. It has a soothing melody that could comfort almost any heartache. Coinciding with the melody is a steady rhythm (played primarily by Campbell's guitar) whose momentum makes the song go as much as anything.

Campbell followed this song with another hit, By the Time I Get to Phoenix, that was as popular as the first hit. The contents of this Jim Webb tune are well known: a sentimental song about a man reluctantly leaving a woman who did not believe he would.

Campbell's version emphasizes the sadness, perhaps the self-pity, in the lyrics. But he has none of the drama we get in O. C. Smith's version, or the detached humor in Frank Sinatra's rendition. This is because Campbell sings the song straight, as he sings most of his material. Maybe this is what we should expect from a man who is basically an instrumentalist.

Campbell learned his instrumental technique early—at the age of four after his father bought him a Sears and Roebuck guitar. He played around his hometown of Delight, Ark., later appearing in a western band, led by his uncle, Dick Bills, in Albuquerque, N.M. From there he went to Hollywood.



CAMPBELL
. . . basically an instrumentalist

AVOIDS RISKY NUMBERS

The lack of vocal background seems to prevent Campbell from swaggering into songs that demand a risk. For example, when he sings Otis Redding's Sitting on the Dock of the Bay, he is spirited, but he seldom strays from the melody. As the song is written, it could be almost any ballad. A singer must explore its blueness—bend the melody, extend notes and shorten others—to shape it into something interesting.

He does this only occasionally. It happens in Tomorrow Never Comes, a love song with gospel undertones. Campbell moans and cries throughout the song's blue strain.

Campbell's vocal technique fits country and western music more than sophisticated ballads or the blues. His version of Ann, a "good woman," rings true. His readings of Buffy Sainte-Marie's Take My Hand for a While and Until It's Time for You to Go are impressive for the sweep and power he gives them.

Fireworks Mark Eaton's Centennial

A blast of fireworks will revive a 100-year-old custom when Vancouver Island Eaton's employees hold a centennial ball Saturday at the Empress Hotel.

Eaton's Recreational Council is sponsoring the event, the first of two large functions planned locally as part of the store's anniversary year celebration.

The second will be an Eaton's family picnic expected to draw 1,000 staff members, wives and families to Mattick's Farm June 25.

Between 500 and 600 persons are expected at the ball, where Scotchish pipes will lead a grand march at 9:30 p.m. and fireworks in the Inner Harbor will go off at 10:30.

The company also is planning a summer golf tournament and a fall curling bonspiel.

Deer Crashes Classroom

REGINA (CP) — Mary had a little lamb—but this was ridiculous.

The Grade 4 class at Massey School was sitting quietly Wednesday in a darkened classroom watching a film.

Moments later pandemonium broke loose when a deer jumped through a window landing on the teacher's desk, scattering crayons and papers in all directions.

Bleeding from cuts, the deer was held down by a couple of teachers while the Humane Society was called. The society sent a taxi to pick up the deer but the driver refused to have anything to do with the wayward animal.

Eventually the deer was taken to an animal clinic in a school board truck.

Fall Kills Actor

VAN NUYS, Calif. (UPI) — Jeffrey Hunter, the athletic actor who portrayed Christ in the remake of the biblical film epic, "King of Kings," died on Tuesday from injuries apparently suffered when he fell down a flight of stairs in his home Monday night.

Lennon, Wife In Bedside Chat

MONTREAL (CP) — Beatle John Lennon and his wife Yoko Ono continued their "bed-in" in a downtown hotel today to promote their adopted product-world peace.

In a bedside interview Wednesday, the British rock singer said he considers peace to be a saleable commodity just like soap or refrigerators.

Lennon said he is convinced people need peace and in a consumer society, people can be talked into buying things they need as well as things they do not need.

"It's like trying to make peace commercial. You make peace into a product."

Before you buy that new, small-size car check its features against Acadian's. And then check the price!

To hear some people, you'd think the idea of smaller, lower-priced cars is exciting and new. It's exciting, all right. We've been saying that since we built our first Acadian—eight years ago. So the idea is great but it's hardly new.

Check out an Acadian. You'll like the nimble handling and beautiful ride that comes with having a 111-in. wheelbase and about three thousand pounds of curb weight. And you'll like the stretch-out comfort of our Acadian—in fact, it has more legroom in front and back than you get in many full-size cars.

When you go "small-size", make sure you don't short-change yourself by going "too small". Outside or inside.

Acadian has some pretty big ideas for its size. It comes with GM's 230-cu.-in. six, the biggest standard six in its class, or a hefty 307-cu.-in. standard V8. But it also offers three optional engines plus four optional transmissions—including GM's famous Torque Drive semi-automatic for only $81.05*! You can dress up your Acadian any way you want, even add front buckets, centre console and a tape player. Buying economical is buying smart, and with Acadian you don't have to skimp.

Before investing in a low-cost car, ask if it has the full complement of standard safety features like passenger-guard door locks, cargo-guard luggage compartment and day/night inside rearview mirror. And whether it has anti-theft features like an ignition, steering and transmission lock plus a buzzer to warn you if you leave your keys in the ignition.

And ask if it offers a choice of two- and four-door models. Check Acadian against the whole economy field—and you'll put your "small-size" money on our proved performer.

*Manufacturer's suggested maximum retail price including Federal sales and excise taxes; provincial and local taxes extra.

Every Acadian has to make it before we mark it GM MARK OF EXCELLENCE

Drums Beating For Sooke Shutang

The students of Edward Milne Secondary School in Sooke are beating the drums to summon more walkers and sponsors for the Moccasin Miles Bhutang Saturday morning.

The students organized the march in response to a request from the Resources for Native Progress Association, Vancouver. More than 150 youngsters from Edward Milne School and Saseenos Elementary School have already signed up for the 26-mile jaunt.

MRS. DOLLY SEEDS
... ready to go

The walkers will leave the Sooke shopping centre at 8 and will step off the route to the Legislative Buildings.

G. F. Seens, principal of Edward Milne, is joining his students and has already found sponsors to underwrite him for 50 cents a mile.

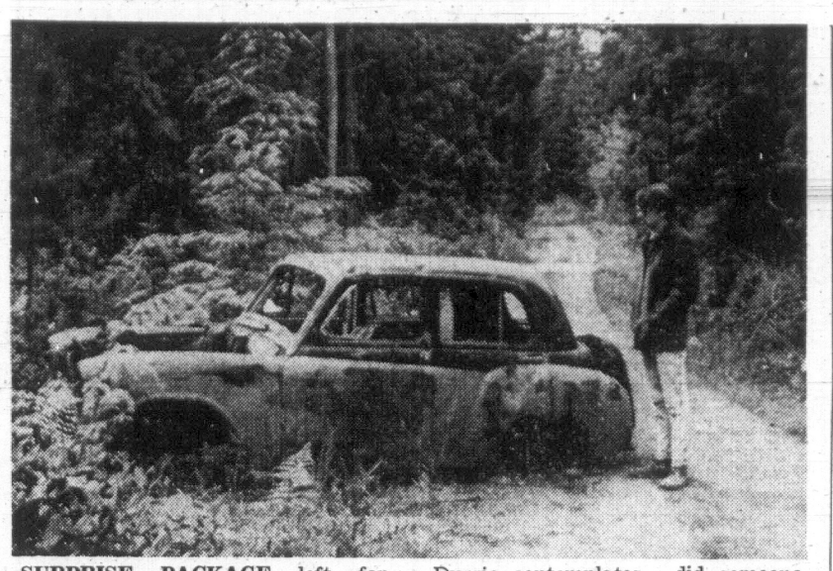
Several members of the Victoria native community including Mrs. Dolly Seeds, 116 Leonard Street, and Chief James Cooper plan to march wearing traditional native dress.

All money raised through the Moccasin March will be used to assist Indians of British Columbia.

More sponsors for the walkers are needed and additional hikers would be welcome. Any individual wishing to participate either actively or by sponsoring a marcher may do so by telephoning Edward Milne School at 652-1511 or Harry Dick, Institute of Adult Studies, 592-1211.

Trial by Judge

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — Seven young members of a motorcycle gang charged in a beer parlor riot here May 13 were remanded to June 16 when they appeared in magistrate's court here Tuesday. They all asked to be tried by a judge without jury. Six of those charged are out on bail totalling $17,500 and the sixth is still in custody.



SURPRISE PACKAGE left for Saturna Island vacationers near East Point is this stripped and abandoned, red and black Hillman with swastika insignia. Another abandoned car body is 200 yards down the road. Another has been pushed over the waterfront cliff. Passerby Tom Durrie contemplates — did someone bring it from Victoria or Vancouver to deliberately desecrate beauty spot? Would an Island resident do it? Who will remove it? Have RCMP checked it for clues to ownership? Is this to be the fate of all British Columbia beauty spots? (Times photo.)

Letter Was Well Mailed

Chemainus, V.I., British Columbia, is ... in the Virgin Islands?

It could be, if the post office is taken as your authority.

It could also be Chemainus, V.I., Bogota, Colombia.

Or it could be in one of a dozen or so other countries.

On Sept. 10, 1967, a letter was mailed from Scarsborough, Ont., to Mr. and Mrs. E. G. English of Chemainus. It just arrived, 20 months later.

It picked up so many postmarks during its world travels the envelope is completely covered with black smudges—only two are decipherable. They are the Virgin Islands and Bogota, Colombia.

When it was sent to the English's, the letter was correctly addressed and had 10 cents postage for airmail.

Mrs. English said the letter must have been opened somewhere on its journey. Family pictures were missing from the envelope which was resealed with tape.

Pretty Summer Shrubs

By HILDA BEASTALL

Three of the prettiest summer flowering shrubs begin blooming towards the end of May. These are deutzia, with several species; weigela, known in eastern Canada as honeysuckle-bush; having many named varieties, and kolkwitzia, one species only, with a common name of beauty-bush.

Hilda

Between them, these shrubs have variety in leaf texture, different branching habits, and flower size ranging from tiny saucers to trumpets more than an inch long.

Colors run from white through pink to ruby red, though not all occur in each genus.

The deutzias have a twiggy habit of growth, and produce small flowers in great sion. They are usually saucer-shaped, white inside and may be flushed with rose on the outside.

Single and double forms are common, and larger flowers occur in one species.

Kolkwitzia, the beauty-bush, has an arching spread of twiggy growth to identify it. Leaves are bronzy, perfectly complementing the small soft pink trumpets with golden throats.

While most early summer shrubs are improved by annual pruning of the flowered portions of the branches, I have seen kolkwitzias making a fine display for 15 years without any pruning.

This genus has only one species, K. amabilis meaning lovely, and as far as I know, there are no varieties.

The last of our shrubs today come in the genus weigela. The hardiest of these grow in southern Ontario, known there as bush-honeysuckle, for the trumpet-shaped blossoms are attractive to hummingbirds.

When the flowered portions of weigelas are cut off just as soon as the flowers fade, they make fountains of color each year.

Pale pink, rich pink and ruby red are the shades.

Valley's Men Plow at 90

QUITO (Reuters) — Ninety-year-old men plow the land at Vilcabamba, a southern Ecuadorean valley where heart conditions are unknown and many persons live to be 130.

Vilcabamba, known to Ecuadoreans as "an island of health and longevity," is a 4,500-foot-high valley in Loja province.

About 10,000 persons lead a quiet rural life in small farms in the valley, where bad roads keep cars away.

Scientists turned to Vilcabamba after a census showed an unusually high number of persons aged between 100 and 130 years living there.

A mission of nine prominent doctors, returning after a long investigation in the valley, reported they checked thoroughly 628 persons, including several aged between 120 and 130 years, and found no heart conditions and few other ailments.

Dr. Miguel Salvador, head of the mission, said: "Any heart patient from any part of the world who went to live in Vilcabamba would obtain improvement in his condition."

LIFE IS QUIET

The quiet life and healthy diet and climate are credited for the unusual good health and long life of Vilcabamba residents.

The Vilcabamba climate is dry and has a constant temperature of around 68 degrees.

Vilcabamba means "sacred valley" in the dialect of the Shuara Indians, who lived in the valley centuries ago.

The valley is linked with the outside world by a primitive dirt road and few foreigners visit the valley.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Influx of Loyalists Created N. Brunswick

By BOB BOWMAN

When the American Revolutionary War ended in 1783 great changes took place in Canada and the Maritimes. About 50,000 people who were loyal to Britain crossed the borders, and Canada changed to a predominantly English-speaking rather than French-speaking nation.

Bowman

The new citizens were known as United Empire Loyalists and most of them settled in present-day Ontario, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

The arrival of the Loyalists made it necessary to create the province of New Brunswick by an act passed on May 29, 1784. Until then the area had been part of Nova Scotia and was governed from Halifax.

However, the new citizens who settled along the St. John River objected to long delays in getting decisions from the government and insisted on having their own legislature. Many of them were former members of Loyalist regiments who had been given grants of land along the river.

The original intention was to call the province New Ireland and this name appears on some of the first documents, but it was changed to New Brunswick before the arrival of the first lieutenant-governor, Thomas Carleton, a brother of Lord Dorchester, governor of Canada.

The first capital was in Saint John, but was moved to St. Anne's Point, now Fredericton, soon after. However, Saint John became the first incorporated city in present-day Canada. It is also known as "the Loyalist city."

Nearly 50 per cent of the citizens of New Brunswick are French-speaking, most of them descendants of the Acadians. They live in the northern part of the province for the most part.

Although the Acadians were deported between 1755 and 1759, many of them managed to return after the Treaty of Paris in 1763 and were given new grants of land along the Madawaska River in 1786.

Other events May 29:

1667—Father Allouez celebrated first mass west of Sault Ste. Marie at Nipigon.

1733—Judge Hocquart ruled that Indians could be held as slaves and sold.

1751—Joseph Boucher, Sieur de Niverville, went up Saskatchewan River to found Fort La Jonquiere. It may have been near Calgary.

Mooching Hippie Cow and Pals Have Town on Horns of Dilemma

By DENNIS BELL

MASSET (CP)—They've got a hippie problem in this crazy-quilt Queen Charlotte Islands community—but there's only one of them and she goes "Moo."

"We call her the Hippie Cow because of her appearance," sighed Mayor Ray Hanson, 38. "It's a big brown one with long, shaggy hair and big horns—gives us nothing but trouble, that damned cow."

The Hippie Cow is a semi-domesticated specimen of the wild cattle that roam Graham Island uninhibited by milk machines, barbed-wire fences or electric cattle prodders.

They were brought here in the middle of the last century by homesteaders who subsequently abandoned their farms, leaving the cattle to fend for themselves in the wilderness.

There are about 60 head of wild cattle left on Graham Island. Of dubious lineage, the only thing that can be said about them is that they appear to have a strain of Texas longhorn in them.

The Hippie Cow, a relatively docile creature as long as it has an ample supply of food, is the self-appointed leader of a flying squad of 10 or so "straight cows" belonging to Indians at the Haida reserve which adjoins Masset.

MENACE GARDENS

Led astray by the Hippie Cow, they meander freely along Masset streets chomping on garden petunias, spilling garbage cans, bothering pedestrians, blocking motor traffic and fertilizing front lawns for free.

"At least we think they belong to the Indians," said the embattled mayor. "Catch one messing up your garden and nobody owns it. Hit one with your car and everybody on the island turns up to claim compensation."

Mr. Hanson said the cow problem has been going on eve. since he took office in 1961, despite the efforts of police, village council, the local animal pound and even his own wife.

He said relations between the 400-member white community at Masset and the 1,000 Indians down the road on the reserve are excellent and he's not anxious to stir up trouble over the cow problem.

"But this is getting ridiculous," said the mayor. "We've tried everything to get the Indians to keep their cows at home—we've begged, pleaded, cajoled, coaxed, argued, joked, even threatened to shoot the cattle—but nothing works.

"There's only 10 cows on the loose right now but the way things have been going I think all of them are probably going to calve. Pretty soon we'll have 20 head wandering the streets.

"They come up behind shoppers and give them a nudge. If you've got a stick of celery poking out of the top of your shopping bag, you're liable to lose a week's food supply.

"They eat everything that isn't nailed down."

COUNCIL CRACKS DOWN

Mayor Hanson said nobody was really hollering about the cow problem until his wife started rocking the boat a couple of years ago.

"She used to push a wheelbarrow and shovel down the street behind them, but all of a sudden she decided it was too much. She started a petition urging the council to do something about it and wound up getting 90 per cent of the people in town to sign it.

"Well, when you get 90 per cent of the voters—including your wife—submitting a petition, you do something about it in a hurry, So we passed a by-law kicking the cattle off the streets."

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Ellen Beth Damsky, age 9, of Utica, New York, for her question:

How do clams get born?

There are dozens of different clams in the world. Some types enjoy life in the muddy banks of fresh water streams and lakes. Others prefer life in the sandy floors and beaches of the salty sea. Most clams care nothing at all for their young ones, but a few types do try to protect their helpless infants.

When you dig up a clam, you can expect to find more. Almost always he has friends and relatives close by, buried or half-buried in the sand or mud. Sometimes they are crowded so close that they almost touch each other. These clams, of course, are grown-ups. Some are males and some are females, the mamas and papas. There is a right time of year to have children but strange to say, the mama and papa clams never date each other. If they never meet and go courting, it seems downright impossible for them to have children. But they do.

The shell of a clam actually is only a house. It is two sturdy shells gripped together by a mighty muscle and it protects the clam from his hungry enemies. The living clam inside the shell is a very lazy fellow with a soft, boneless body. He opens his shells a crack to let in the water and the water brings in bits of floating food for him to digest. The water also brings oxygen which he breathes through his gills. Sometimes he bothers himself to dig a bit deeper, but most of the time he has nothing to do.

Larva Clams

However, at the right time of year, mother nature orders a new generation of clams. The mother clam's body grows a batch of egg cells and the father clam's body grows a batch of cells called sperm. When these cells are ready, the parents spill them out to the water. The water is clouded with zillions of these tiny-tiny clam cells. Lots of them pair off and join together, an egg cell from a female clam and a sperm from a male clam. Together they form a fertilized egg with all the know-how to grow into a baby clam. But the watery world is a dangerous place, full of hungry creatures. Most of the cloudy cells and even most of the baby clams get gobbled up before they grow up. A few lucky ones escape and sink to the bottom where they feed and enjoy life. After a while, each baby clam spins a fine thread to tie himself down. He dines on floating scraps of food and grows to be as wide as a pea. Then it is time to hide. He starts to bury himself in the wet sand or mud. And chances are, dozens of other little clams from the same brood are settling nearby. Their childhood is over and here they stay for the rest of their lives.

Most maman and papa clams do nothing to help their children or to teach them how to grow up, but certain clams who live in fresh water streams are better mothers. They do not spill their egg cells out into the water. Instead, they catch some of the sperm cells as they drift by. The egg cells and sperm cells pair together and the mother clam keeps the fertilized eggs in her gills. There they grow and develop into larva clams. It takes about 300 of them to measure one inch. At last mama sends them outside her shells, out to cope with life in their watery world.

Andy sends a World Book Globe to Betsy Klaczak, age 12, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, for her question:

Is it true that the sun never sets?

Every evening, of course, the sun sinks down in the western sky above Pittsburgh and sets below the horizon. Except for the polar regions, it sets each day above every place in the world. It is also quite true to say that the sun never sets at all. For while it is setting above Pittsburgh, a new sunrise is dawning in Tibet, on the opposite side of the globe. The globe itself explains the mystery. Our planet is continuously turning around and around on its axis, like a spinning top. As it rotates, it turns first one side then another to face a great blazing star which is about 93 million miles out there in space. This star, of course, is the sun that never sets.

The earth spins towards the east, and on its surface the city of Pittsburgh spins around with it. During the night you are turned away from the sun but the far side of the globe is turned to face it. In 24 hours the earth spins you clear around in a circle and through every calendar day the sun is shining on half the globe. As it sets on one side, it rises on the far side and never does it set on the whole world at the same time.

SHOWPIECE greenhouse, composed of three Quonset-type buildings joined together, was built at the Dominion Experimental Farm to house experiments which have produced the world's first disease-free tomato. Constructed of fiberglas, the greenhouse is the first fully automated building of its kind in Canada.

New House Yields Better Tomato

By HUMPHRY DAVY

John and Charlie Lum have come up with a better tomato.

In doing so they have built Canada's first fully-automated greenhouse constructed of fibreglass.

It all came about as a result of experiments carried out at the Saanichton Dominion Experimental Farm by growing tomatoes in sawdust.

The fruits are disease free and no insecticides or fungicides are used in the growing process.

The brothers built their "automatic" greenhouse on Oldfield Road.

The greenhouse went into operation in February with 7,500 plants which are expected to yield about 75,000 pounds of tomatoes between now and the end of June.

Another crop will be planted during the summer for picking in the fall.

"I have never seen trusses so heavily laden with tomatoes," said Alan Littler, B.C. district horticulturist. "The greenhouse is an agricultural showpiece."

The greenhouse is, in effect three Quonset type buildings joined together, with a floor area of 22,000 square feet. It's 172 feet long and 123 feet wide.

Inside the building is an environmental control panel which takes care of all plant needs, temperature, humidity, watering and feeding.

The Lums could leave the plant for days and the control panel would take care of things.

The plants growing in sawdust are fed from a 1,000-gallon tank containing chemical nutrients. The solution is distributed to the vines through plastic pipes.

Separate Building

The feeding tank and oil heating plant are in a separate building.

The use of fibreglass constructed greenhouses for growing vegetables is new.

"We have found that the light through fibreglass is more intense and diffused," John said. "We still have lots to learn on the effects of light."

The Lums say they owe a lot to Bob Adamson and Ted Moas, research officers at the expermiental farm for the success of their operation.

The two men three years ago started experimenting with growing tomatoes in a soiless culture and passed on the results of tests to the brothers.

The Lums said the building is maintenance free and two men can operate a greenhouse half an acre in size. Crop yields are higher — between eight and 10 pounds per vine.

Under Old System

Under the old system of growing tomatoes in soil and under glass, it takes at least four men to operate a similar establishment. Maintenance costs are high as glass breaks frequently. Crop yields are between five to six pounds per plant.

Plant diseases occur frequently and the tomatoes have to be sprayed with pesticides.

It also takes two men half-a day to pollinate the plants by hand. Fans now do the work in five or six minutes.

John and Charlie Lum are not new to the greenhouse business. They belong to an old Victorian-born Chinese family who operated for years greenhouses on Shelbourne Street under the name of Young Brothers.

They are still operating under that name.

Stamp Valuable

NEW YORK (AP) — A 1918 "upside - down" U.S. Airmail stamp with an inverted airplane in the centre sold for $31,000 Wednesday, twice what a collector paid for it in 1964. Myron Kaller of Farmingdale, N.Y., bought the 24-cent stamp at an auction at H. R. Harmer Galleries.

$160,000 Compensation Paid

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada paid Japan $160,000 compensation for a shipment of poor wheat as "good business practice," S. B. Williams, deputy minister of agriculture, told the Commons agriculture committee today.

Frank Hamilton, chairman of the board of grain commissioners, said the deal involved two shipments of No. 4 wheat and the Japanese purchasers got what they ordered. It was not tough or damp.

The complaint was that the wheat was not satisfactory for making the particular type of bread required. Mr. Hamilton said the purchasers were told that when they ordered No. 4 they could not expect to get the best.

Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) raised the question: "How did we get an unsatisfied customer?" He said the board is supposed to police all overseas shipments to ensure that standards are maintained.

Mr. Hamilton said it was not a problem of grade. If it had been, the complaint would have been made to the grain commissioners.

He said the purchasers admitted they had no claim against the quality of the wheat. The problem was "the schmozzle at the West Coast."

New Railway Opens Up Resources-Rich Alberta Area

GRANDE PRAIRIE, Alta. (CP) — Heralded as opening a new economic era for northwestern Alberta, completion of the Alberta Resources Railway was made official Wednesday, climaxing five years of work and an expenditure of $96,000,000.

Premier Harry Strom drove the final spike with three swings of a silver-plated railway axe during a ceremony in this city of 12,000.

"Already the line has begun to stimulate the economy," Mr. Strom said.

Agriculture and forestry will receive immediate benefits, the coal industry will use the 235-mile line and a new town will be established.

There were "those who said the line would be too hard to build, too expensive, too risky," just like those who argued against the trans-continental railway a hundred years ago, the premier said.

As before, the "nervous nellies" would be proved wrong.

PRAISES MANNING

He paid tribute to former premier E. C. Manning and Roger Graham, now retired vice-president of Canadian National Railways, for their foresight and faith in the new rail link tapping vast resource wealth in the province's Peace River region.

Mr. Manning and Mr. Graham used an eight-foot logging saw to cut through a birch pole installed across the tracks, symbolic of removing the last obstruction to completing the line.

A. O. Aalborg, provincial treasurer and chairman of the ARR Corp., which will turn the railway operations over to the CNR, tightened the last bolt holding the 39-foot length of rail which joins the ARR to Northern Alberta Railways.

The ARR completes the most direct rail link extending from the mineral-rich Hay River, N.W.T., region 500 miles north of Edmonton to Pacific ports.

The ARR runs through rugged terrain in the heart of timber, coal, natural gas and oil reserves, much of it previously unreachable by any form of ground transportation.

The rail line cuts 300 miles from previous Grande Prairie-West Coast railway routes and links with the Great Slave Lake Railway into the mineral wealth of the N.W.T.

The railway's southern terminus is near Solomon, 180 miles west of Edmonton on the trans-continental line of the CNR.

Originally estimated to cost $40,000,000, the province provided the initial capital for construction. CNR built the line and will operate it on a 20-year lease basis with option to purchase.

Premier Strom said:

"Transportation is the key to coal and other resource extraction and will provide a sound basis for opening mining and industrial operations."

He said that initially 2,000,000 tons of coking coal will be shipped annually by McIntyre Porcupine Mines and "major pipe lines have been and are being constructed."

RETURNS LARGER

Returns are bigger, but slower coming in for the current Salvation Army's Red Shield appeal.

Capt. Hugh Tilley reports today that Monday's totals showed that $54,258 had been collected toward the target figure of $78,700.

"The returns that we have in now show an increase over the 1968 averages and I'm confident that we'll meet our target."

The drive, which began May 1, will continue until June 15.

Ottawa Approves Housing Projects

ISRAELI PLANES DOWN SYRIAN MiG

Israeli planes battled Syrian MiGs over Quneitra in the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights today and shot down one of them in a dogfight nearly two miles up, an Israeli military spokesman reported in Jerusalem.

It was the second outbreak of fighting between Israeli and Syrian forces this week. Ground forces battled in the Quneitra area earlier this week in the first such outbreak since the 1967 six-day war.

Fighting flared elsewhere along the cease-fire line with rockets reported landing in the town of Jericho.

Troop Cutback 'Negotiable'

BRUSSELS (CP)—Canada appeared today to be yielding moderately to strong pressure from allies to ease its planned "phased reduction" of its NATO forces in Europe.

After sessions with NATO colleagues disenchanted with the Canadian proposal, Defence Minister Cadieux indicated to reporters Wednesday night that both the size and the timing of the Canadian cuts now are negotiable.

On Wednesday, a conference source released the first word that Canada was prepared to review its decision to reduce NATO forces but no details were released at that time.

A high American source said that the United States has urged the Canadian government to review its proposals—the outcome of a long reappraisal of foreign and defence policy. He added: "This is not the time for reduction."

While Cadieux refused to disclose figures on the size of the proposed Canadian cut in European forces, this official said the U.S. impression was that Canada wanted to slice them by two-thirds of strength.

These figures, the first specific suggestion of the size of the Canadian reductions, purported to be the American impression of what Cadieux told U.S. Defence Secretary Melvin Laird at a pre-meeting private session.

REFUSES TO SAY

Cadieux told reporters, in a sparring session in which he declined to reveal much, that the man who issued them must know more than he did. However, he refused to deny or confirm them.

The minister was playing the cards close to the vest here because the Canadian procedure is not to make public the reduction proposals until Cadieux reports to Parliament on June 2.

He made these points:

1. Canada hopes to have its European "adjustment" completed by 1972.

2. The existing brigade group of 5,500 men in West Germany would be replaced by a smaller mobile unit transportable by air. The size was unspecified, but Cadieux said it would be bigger than a regiment.

3. There would have to be "some reduction" in the size of the air division in West Germany, though the minister said this would "not necessarily" be the 20-per-cent cut planned for last year but deferred through 1969 after the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia alarmed NATO.

4. There would be a "study of all naval services in the near future."

N-War Guidelines Reviewed

LONDON (AP) — U.S. Defence Secretary Melvin Laird and six NATO colleagues opened talks today on guidelines for the use of nuclear weapons in Europe to protect the North Atlantic allies.

The defence ministers of the United States, Britain, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Turkey and Denmark had before them a top-secret study by Britain and West Germany on how the NATO nuclear might stationed in Europe can be used best to deter a Soviet attack.

Earlier British research showed that use of NATO's tactical nuclear weapons on a European battlefield and the Soviet retaliation that probably would follow would devastate the area. The possibility that West Germany would be the battlefield spurred the search for alternative tactics that might deter the Russians from an attack.

DEMONSTRATION BOMB

One suggestion was explosion of a "demonstration bomb" in an area where it could do little harm. The idea would be to warn the Soviets the West was prepared to use nuclear weapons if necessary.

Other proposals included the use of maritime nuclear explosions and atomic land mines on possible Soviet invasion routes.

British Defence Minister Denis Healey, co-author of the British-German study, has said that in the event of a major Soviet attack, NATO would have to surrender or use nuclear weapons within a few days because of the superior conventional striking force of the Soviet bloc. He says this superiority is more than 2 to 1 in infantry formations, nearly 2 to 1 in aircraft, and nearly 3 to 1 in armored units.

Districts Get Loans for Land

OTTAWA (CP)—The government has displayed more of its housing policy by removing the freeze on public housing projects and promising loans to provinces and municipalities to buy land for private homes.

Robert Andras, minister without portfolio given responsibility for housing after Paul Hellyer resigned from the cabiset last month, announced removal of the freeze as the Commons opened second-reading debate on the government's housing bill Wednesday.

At a press conference today, Mr. Andras said the government will give "clear signals on the fate of 11 frozen urban renewal schemes within a matter of weeks." The policy decision on the freeze imposed last fall will follow and intense personal examination starting today.

STALLED PROJECTS

Five of the $40,000,000 worth of stalled projects are in B.C., at Cloverdale, Ladner, Port Coquitlam, Vancouver and New Westminster. Five are in Ontario and one is at Calgary.

The projects were frozen largely because of a government view that they tended to eliminate usable housing, thus intensifying the housing shortage.

Mr. Andras said he hoped there will be "an informal effect" on the nature of urban renewal applications in the light of the government's views.

He hoped the same effect would apply in the character of public housing projects. In both public housing and urban renewal, the government wants more emphasis on housing content and rehabilitation of existing buildings.

He doubted that his housing legislation, which includes the freeing of house mortgage interest rate, will result in an immediate decrease in the price of houses.

But ultimately the government moves to increase the supply of housing, build up serviced land banks and so on will have their effect.

INTEREST RATES

He said the theory is that mortgage interest rates—currently 9¾ per cent—won't rise any higher when the rate is freed. Now it is set at 2¼ per cent above the government's bond rate.

Mr. Andras said the tendency is for the maximum established to become the minimum. The pegged rate gives lenders a "target to shoot at."

The bill removes interest ceilings on National Housing Act mortgages—now 9, per cent—and much of the cabinet's control over Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

Informants said the government now favors row housing and dispersed accommodation rather than the big high-rise projects.

Mr. Andras also said he will amend the bill to permit provincial and municipal governments to borrow from Ottawa to buy land for building private houses.

The National Housing Act now provides for 90 per cent federal loans to provinces, municipalities or public housing agencies to buy and service land for public housing. The amendment would extend these loans to cover private housing as well.

Opposition criticism Wednesday focused mainly on the housing problems of low-income workers, high interest rates and growing land costs.

The Ra Sails On

ST. PETERSBURGH, Fla. (UPI) — Thor Heyerdahl's papyrus boat Ra gave its position today as 80 miles north of Lanzarote, the northeast island in the Canaries group, and said all was "going well" on the voyage across the Atlantic.

Norman Baker, the American navigator, said published reports that Dr. Yuri Cenkevich, the expedition's Russian medical officer, was ill with a high fever was erroneous.

The report from the Ra, which is attempting to prove Egyptians could have sailed to Latin America in papyrus boats centuries ago, was picked up by amateur radio operators here.

Offer Raised In Brewery Takeover Bid

By G. S. KENT
Times Business Editor

New York-based Philip Morris Corp. today raised its bid to take over Canada's largest brewing complex by $3 a share to $15 for a possible $163.2 million total value to Canadian Breweries Ltd. shareholders.

Meanwhile the Times learned in a telephone interview with the Canadian spokesmen for the takeover that buyers of Canbrew stock at lower recent prices will stand to make $30 million profit as a result of the bid.

A local investment dealer said he "would not rule out the possibility of an investigation of some kind."

The man who helped mastermind the Philip Morris bid is Ward C. Pitfield, Toronto, 43-year-old president of Pitfield, Mackay, Ross and Co., investment dealers, who said organization came from both sides of the border.

He said he had been "at it since last December," and that the current proposal for control of Canbrew came after "broad discussion" involving other prospective buyers.

Pitfield's firm heads a dealer syndicate representing Philip Morris to shareholders in Canada.

Pitfield's remarks came as some surprise to the investment community and mitigated against the notion that the offer for take over was American-inspired.

Pitfield said "it was our desire to take a firm hand in Canadian Breweries." He said it was felt that the 10 per cent ownership represented by Rothman's of Pall Mall Canada Ltd. was not sufficient to ensure the sort of growth expected.

Canbrew earnings have fallen consistently since 1965 and the company's share of the beer market has dropped from 48 per cent to about 35 per cent. Most of Canbrew's sales are in the U.S. and Britain.

Pitfield said a "meeting of minds" was reached with Philip Morris Corp., which was felt to have the management and marketing ideas needed by Canbrew to regain its position.

The U.S. company offered $12 per share for 50 per cent of the outstanding shares of Canadian Breweries, or a total of 10.88

COMING HOME to the command ship is the Apollo 10 lunar module after its close-up view of the moon's surface. (AP Wirephoto.)

Film Acts as Roadmap For Apollo 11 Crew

SPACE CENTRE, Houston (UPI) — The space agency today released breathtaking film and photographs shot by Apollos 10's moon pilots that will serve as a roadmap for man's first landing on the lunar surface in July.

As the film preview of man's first descent to the moon were released, the Apollo 11 astronauts who will make that landing made their first full-scale rehearsal of a lunar approach shown in the movies.

Astronauts Neil A. Armstrong and Edwin E. "Buz" Aldrin spent today in a moon landing simulator at Cape Kennedy, practising the final approach and landing with mission controllers in Houston as though it was the real thing.

It was the first simulation linking mission control and the astronauts at the cape, a space agency spokesman said. Many others will follow, the official said, to check every step of the flight to send Americans to walk the waterless lunar seas.

The 205 feet of movies released today were the second group of photographs made public from the Apollo 10 mission. There also were 87 frames of color still photography. All the shots were more spectacular than film released Wednesday.

Space agency geologist John Dietrich said Apollo 10's crewmen missed getting movies of the prime landing site as they swooped to within 9.5 miles of it, apparently because they jiggled the camera accidentally. But he said they got "perfect" scenes of the approach to that site.

Ship Crushes Two In Launch Mishap

COLLINGWOOD, Ont. (CP) — Two men were reported killed and at least 28 injured today when a 730-foot self-unloading cargo ship slid into the water accidentally minutes before it was to be launched at Collingwood Shipyards.

About 100 men were reported working under the boat when the accident occurred and company officials were not immediately certain how many escaped.

Divers began searching the water for injured men and an ambulance shuttle service was set up to take the injured to hospital.

Five of those taken to hospital suffered minor injuries and were released. The others required additional examination.

The 25,000-ton ship is believed the largest built at the shipyards.

The accident occurred when workers began to knock the stern blocks loose, and the ship suddenly began to slide into the water. The bow swung, trapping some men underneath.

U.S. Onslaught Rips Viet Truce

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. forces crashed a Viet Cong strategy meeting 28 miles northwest of Saigon today during a 48 hour ceasefire the Viet Cong had proclaimed in honor of Buddha's birthday.

The Viet Cong ceasefire began at 7 a.m. Southern allied forces were to start a 24-hour truce period at 6 a.m. Friday. Meanwhile, more than 50 southern allied operations of battalion size or larger continued without letup.

At least 50 Viet Cong were reported killed in the action northwest of Saigon. Initial reports said one American was killed and seven wounded.

"They were congregating in there for their stand-down period," said a U.S. military spokesman. "We had intelligence information they were going to be in there for a meeting to plan actions for summer campaign next month. We were not standing down."

It was a sparsely settled farm area of scattered houses, rice paddies and bamboo hedgerows. Military spokesmen said an American plane with a loudspeaker flew over, urging the Viet Cong to surrender and calling on the rest of the people to move out.

The spokesmen said about 200 women and children moved out, but the Viet Cong started shooting with machine-guns and rocket grenades.

TRUDEAU: Think Regional, One Canada Just a Slogan

This is the final article by political analyst Peter Regenstreif on Prime Minister Trudeau after one year in office. Today's survey covers how optimistic the country is about the future and over economic matters.

By PETER REGENSTREIF

Voters are almost evenly divided between being more optimistic or less about the future of their country after a year with Pierre Trudeau as their prime minister according to a national survey.

They are also split over their own economic situation and prospects.

Regionally, the patterns are related. Those areas that are optimistic about personal economic prospects tend to be optimistic about the nation's political future. The pessimists about personal finances are political pessimists.

747 Interviewed

These findings emerge from a survey of 747 voters interviewed in their homes. The survey began on April 20 — exactly one year to the day that Trudeau succeeded Lester Pearson as prime minister.

Voters were asked about the job Trudeau was doing, how they would vote in a federal election, the issues they considered important and their preferences among the party leaders for prime minister.

They were also asked whether they were more optimistic or less about the future of Canada "now that Pierre Trudeau has been prime minister for a year."

While 26 per cent replied they were more optimistic, another 23 per cent claimed they were less optimistic with 52 per cent stating that their feelings had not changed over the year.

Optimistic

The Prairies are the most pessimistic region: only 18 per cent are more optimistic while 33 per cent are less optimistic.

In all other areas, the optimistics outnumber the pessimists. Ontario is the most optimistic province followed by British Columbia.

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, MAY 29, 1969 —PAGE 23

CITY SUFFERS SMOG TREATMENT

It looks grim, it smells rank, it tastes foul and it's called smog.

Victoria got the full treatment this morning.

Every chimney, incinerator, exhaust pipe and garbage heap was contributing its fumes.

Office windows were closed, air conditioners were shut off, cars in the Gorge area looked almost fogged-in, eyes were blinking tears.

Deputy Fire Chief Carl Coates said "It's what we call quite a heavy atmosphere."

Weatherman Alan McQuarrie at Victoria Airport explained that the city was getting a small taste of a phenomenon called "inversion."

To begin with, the air is saturated to 100 per cent humidity. A light southwest breeze is just sufficient to move the smoke and other fumes around.

A high front, moving in from the southwest, is carrying clouds that are squeezing down over the city—all the smoke that normally sails up and away is just hanging low.

McQuarrie noted that the breeze should pick up and the front continue to move, clearing the air by evening.

Berry Harvest Faces Trouble

A bumper crop of strawberries on the Saanich Peninsula is on the verge of ripening but a shortage of pickers and a bus strike could hamper harvesting.

"I've never seen the blossoms so heavy or the fruit forming so thick," Dixon Holloway, president of the Saanich Fruit Growers' Association, said today.

He said the need for pickers would begin in earnest Monday and probably 500 would be required at the peak of the crop in mid-June.

"There are not enough pickers in sight at the moment but we're optimistic when people see the berries on the market they'll get the idea and turn out for picking," he added.

BUS PROBLEM

Getting the pickers to the 60 or 70 acres of strawberries on the peninsula is a problem this year because of the 21-day-old strike at Vancouver Island Coach Lines.

Growers have lined up two independent buses which they hope will handle the job until the strike ends. But 12 buses were used last year at the peak of the season.

Hiring pickers is co-ordinated by the local Manpower office and people wanting work are asked to phone the farm labor section at 385-6711. Fruit farmers phone in their requests for labor to the same section.

Holloway said the suggested minimum pay rates for pickers are the same as last year, 75 cents for the 12-pint boxes that make up a crate for the fresh fruit market and 60 cents for 12 pounds of strawberries picked for processing.

HEALTHFUL

Most of the pickers are young people. A good picker can average $5 a day through the season, he said, with some earning as much as $12 a day.

"It's a little hard on the back until you get broken in—but very healthful."

Holloway said a harsh winter hit the strawverry crop hard on the mainland with frost killing many plants.

"We were very fortunate on the peninsula to have the snow cover before the frost came."

The strawberry season lasts six to seven weeks and loganberries, ripe early in July usually, extend the picking season through the rest of the summer.

20-Cent Coffee By Midsummer Says Caterer

By MARJORIE PARKER

Bad news for coffee drinkers.

F. M. Peace, assistant catering manager Sidney Travelodge, predicts that by midsummer, the price of a single cup of coffee in Victoria will be 20 cents.

He explained that the restaurant industry cannot absorb the increased overhead attributable to spiralling food and labor costs.

Beef prices have risen 20 per cent in the past two weeks and wholesale pastry prices by 13 per cent.

So a participant in the coffee break club, an accepted privilege of the labor force, will have to shell out another $25 a year for his beverage.

Figure it out; two cups of coffee a day, five working days a week, 50 working weeks a year. An increase of five cents a cup: 2 times 5 times 50 equals $25 by either the old or the new maths.

Two Men Arrested In Stabbing

City police have arrested two men in connection with the early Tuesday morning stabbing of a University of Victoria student.

George F. Wright, 19, and Hector Joseph Guilmette, 21, both of CFB Esquimalt, are charged with theft of an automobile. Guilmette is also charged with wounding with the intent to cause bodily harm.

Police said the men were taken into custody this morning and were to appear in central court later today.

About 4 a.m. Tuesday Orville James Brown, 23, of 3240 Harriet, was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital with a single stomach wound. He is in fair condition today.

Wright and Guilmette suffered minor injuries in a car accident before 6 a.m. Tuesday.

Private Cars Take Priority On Stretched Ferry

Private cars will have priority over larger vehicles when Queen of Esquimalt goes back to work June 13.

The ferry has been "stretched to increase her car accommodation from 142 to 192 and to maitain schedules her loading and unloading time must be cut to a'mininum.

For that reason, according to B.C. Ferry authorities, Queen of Esquimalt will load private cars first, along with buses.

If space and time permits, campers, house trailers and mobile homes will have a secondary priority. Commercial vehicles and trucks will have no priority. They should not be scheduled for this ferry.

The system will prevail between June 13 and September 22 on Queen of Esquimalt sailings from Swartz Bay daily at 8 a.m., noon and 4 and 8 p.m.

CHRISTOPHER PAUL . . . . "feels nature"

Birds Are Singing A Camping Holiday For July, August

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Squehal Haewa-ah.

These two Indian words should gladden the hearts of many people planning on taking their holidays in July and August.

Translated into English by Christopher Paul, 75-year-old member of the Tsartlip (Brentwood) band, it means Vancouver Island is going to get camping days this summer.

He made the prediction today after observing signs of nature and activities of birds.

"When blue camass grows profusely and the birds are a little late in raising their young — as they are this year—it usually means we are in for a hot, sunny summer," he said.

But the month of June, he said, would be a mixture of clouds, rain and sun.

"We will get some hot days in June," he said, "but the long sunny periods will start when the moon is full on June 29."

Paul also said it would be a good growing season.

He noted roots of some wild plants, once used widely as a source of food by Indians, were growing profusely this year.

"I have never seen so many wild camass in flower," he said. "This means a good growing season."

He said it was easy to tell what the weather was going to be from day to day, but quite a different matter to make a long-range forecast.

"When the birds twitter and chatter a lot or the wind is blowing south and southeast, you know that rain is not far off. But to make a long range forecast you not only have to observe nature, but feel it."

To feel nature, he explained, requires the use of all six senses and a deep understanding for all living things.

"Most people today just see things—they travel to see things, but they don't feel."

Paul who spends most of his days outside in his garden, returned to his weeding.

"Squehal Haewa-ah," he took up his hoe. "Good camping days to you."

'KID GLOVE' TREATMENT FOR ART

The National Gallery of Canada is taking no chances with a $200,000 Flemish masterpiece, now on display at the Greater Victoria Art Gallery.

The huge canvas, "As the Old Sing, So the Young Twitter" by 17th century master Jacob Jordaens, is being carried on a cross-Canada tour by a special truck.

The truck is designed to minimize the drastic temperature differences in different areas of Canada, with special humidity and temperature controls.

The galleries at which the painting will be on view also have special temperature and humidity controls as well as electronic guarding systems.

"We have a special guarding system in the Victoria gallery because some of our own collection are in the $100,000 range," explained gallery director Colin Graham, today.

THEFT UNLIKELY

"There's little danger of a painting this large and this well-known being stolen," added Graham.

The painting, completed about 1640, measures eight feet by five feet.

It is an oil on canvas depicting the celebration of the Epiphany. The title is a Flemish saying, meaning that the young imitate the follies of their elders.

Jordaens himself is identified as the jester on the painting. His wife Catharina is believed to be one of the subjects.

The painting was described by a Berlin gallery director in 1854 who wrote "size and richness of composition, solid execution and power of color, render this one of the best examples of a subject so often treated by him."

SHORT VISIT

The painting will be on view in Victoria until June 8. It will then be taken to the Vancouver gallery.

The public can view the masterpiece Tuesday through Saturday between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m.; Sunday between 2 and 5 p.m. and Thursday between 7:30 and 9:30 p.m.

Several Hurt In Accident Involving Bus

Several persons were taken to St. Joseph's Hospital shortly before noon today after an accident involving a B.C. Hydro bus at Douglas and Pembroke.

A hospital spokesman said all were in satisfactory condition. Exact number of injured was not known at press time.

No details were immediately available from police who were out at a number of less serious crashes.

ROBERT ADAMS

Wooden Leg All He Wants For Good Life

Premier Bennett, just back from 3,300 miles of driving the province's roads, today told reporters he found British Columbians everwhere are enjoying the good life.

But he must have shut his eyes when his car suddenly swerved in the Legislative Building driveway minutes earlier as he arrived at his office.

A one-legged, one-eyed young steamfitter from Parksville apparently caused the swerve.

He was parading, on crutches, with a sandwich-board poster announcing "The Good Life?"

Bennett didn't stop and ask the demonstrator about his complaint before entering the building where he gave his report to the reporters.

If he had, this is what 26-year-old Robert Danny Adams would have told him.

"I come from Victoria although I now live in Parksville.

"In June of 1967, I was smashed up in a serious auto accident in New York state.

"That September I came back to B.C. and by October, although I didn't want to, I was forced to go on welfare because I still couldn't work. I need a wooden leg which was promised by the welfare people.

"I've got a good trade and I could go back to work if I could walk again. They've been telling me to wait; to be paitient.

"Finally I wrote (Social Welfare Minister Dan) Campbell.

"He wrote back saying that I would get my leg in three weeks.

"That was six weeks and three days ago so I decided I had to do something.

"So I've come down here for the day to try to get some attention for my case."

Not Just Saturna Will Be Affected

By PETE LOUDON

The fate of Saturna Island Free School—with its 21 pupils, four horses, chickens, rabbits, goats, dogs, cats and eight guitars—has been determined by the Metropolitan Health Board.

Senior medical officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread checked the school Tuesday.

"I know what action we're taking.

"When we take it depends on when we get advice," he said today.

He said letters seeking this advice have gone to British Columbia ministers of education, health and welfare.

"This isn't just a matter of the Saturna Free School," the doctor said ominously. And that's all he would say.

To Tom Durrie, the school's organizer, and his staff of five and his covey of nature children, the words doomed the school.

The dream which Tom Durrie now sees fading, began in 1960 when he was 29 and winding up three years as a teacher in California in his native U.S.A.

He and his wife Gretel, Miles, 11, and Emily, 9, struck out for Canada seeking space and land. It was an impulse born of dissatisfaction with prescribed forms of learning.

He taught seven years in B.C., at Burnaby, Hazleton and Williams Lake, before deciding that the B.C. curricula were no more rewarding than those of California. He took a job as director of The New School In Vancouver—a parent-owned co-operative school which ended in a philosophical disagreement.

"Their ideas were liberal—mine were radical," he recalls. He brought four pupils and three staff members to Saturna to open a revolutionary free school based on his own philosophy of learning.

Staff includes Lyn Bowman, Rini House, Bill Sheffeld, John Laing (who is getting his degree in education at UBC today) and Gretel.

20 Registered, More Applied

That was last summer. They had 20 students registered by September and many more applications.

Seventeen sets of parents represented by the 21 children aged six to 16 live in Vancouver mostly—but others are in the U.S. and Mexico and Canadian centres such as Saskatoon and Montreal. Eleven of the 17 sets of parents depend on teaching for their livelihoods.

"They sent their children here because they believe in a free education, not prescribed but following th child's directions and needs.

"We work on the assumption that man is a learning individual by nature."

There are no grades, no marks, no government exams, no jurisdiction by the department of education (the latter being true of all private schools).

"Some of the older ones elect to work toward a high school diploma. If he needs that piece of paper, he can get it." Tom says when a youngster finds he needs formal education, that is the time to get it. When he reaches that decision he learns much faster.

In the meantime, he claims the free school pupil learns by living.

"We start with the interest the child brings with him, proceed with what they want to do.

"The younger ones learn arithmetic when they want to handle change or put things together." They learn to read because they want to recognize their names and share in the fun of the school paper.

The kids who go fishing learn biology and anatomy in the gutting process. Two youngsters applied a battery to a fish's heart recently and made it pulse again, he says.

Orders Seldom Heard at School

They learn their English in the process of letter-writing—because they want to communicate—not because they are ordered to write an essay.

Orders are seldom heard at the free school. Decisions are made by group discussion. The older boy who ducked a younger one and frightened him during a swim session evoked a general discussion on relationships between weak and strong. Tom felt it taught him more than any punishment.

Free schools aren't new—there are two in Victoria—and elsewhere in B.C. there are more. Some have collapsed. Some thrive. What they accomplish isn't the nitty gritty of the story of the Saturna School.

The problem area here is that the school is located in a large rambling farmhouse built by pioneer Gerald Payne on Payne Road about 1890.

It was sagging and dilapidated when Tom took over. He and his staff renovated it as best they could (with their academic leanings).

They put in an electric stove to bolster the wood range, installed toilets, showers and bedrooms and dormitories with triple-decker wood frame beds.

The visitor sees children and their natural litter everywhere. Treasured artwork colors the walls. Ony may hear simultaneously, a flute, a clarinet, a piano, an electric organ, a tape recorder and a television.

The kids and the staff often affect the abandoned appearance and long hair of the individualists square society calls "hippie."

The staff has reason to be casual in dress.

"None of us are salaried. All that comes in (tuition fees) goes into the school." The staff gets its basic needs and room and board.

Villagers have been kind, says Tom. But it's easy to imagine some might resent kids who are undisciplined, who don't conform, who dress strangely, who wear long hair, who call their teacher "Dewey."

Situations like that seem to invite demands on authority to "close them down", "run them out." (Cool Aid people here can tell you about that.)

Dr. Whitbread hasn't said whether his personal interest in the Saturna Free School was fired by complaints against it.

Tom says that health inspector Daryl Anderson had been out a number of times without causing any concern about the school's sanitation.

"Then out of the blue Dr. Whitbread appeared. The house was messy that day and needed picking up." Next came press stories that unless "drastic steps" were taken at the school it faced closure.

A letter from the doctor was less explosive than the accounts of the Metro health board meeting.

"It asked for kitchen renovations, proper furniture and bedding and extensive cleaning by May 20. Presumably his visit Tuesday was to check up on that."

There's only so much can be done to modernize a 79-year-old house. A saving grace may be that at least the kids spend as much time outside as they do inside. And Saturna air has it all over city air.

Was this reporter appalled by the conditions? Hardly. He's seen too many homes in Victoria occupied by low income families, which are in much worse condition due to circumstances the residents can't alter.

BIGGEST ARMADA GATHERING IN INNER HARBOR

164 Yachts Will Answer Swiftsure Roll Call

The invasion has begun. The first vanguard of the biggest armada of yachts to gather at the Inner Harbor is already tied alongside, waiting for Saturday and the beginning of the annual Swiftsure and Juan de Fuca classics.

Spectators along Dallas Road will see 164 yachts make their way to the start line Saturday morning. Swiftsure entries number 103 while 38 smaller boats are entered in Juan de Fuca.

In addition 12 Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet boats will be sailing the Swiftsure course in a race of their own, beginning with Swiftsure yachts at 9:30 a.m.

Eleven PHRF boats will start at 9:45 a.m. with the Juan de Fuca competitors sailing their own race to Clallam Bay and back.

STARTING LINE

HMCS Cowichan and HMCS Miramichi will form the start line with the starting signals being fired aboard HMCS Cowichan.

The two courses, 136 and 76 miles respectively, will be patrolled by the two navy vessels, supplemented by HMCS Porte de la Reine, HMCS Porte Quebec and the United States coastguard vessel Point Countess from Port Angeles.

Swiftsure boats will round HMCS Miramichi at the outward station while the Royal Canadian Mounted Police's Victoria will act as rounding mark in Clallam Bay for Juan de Fuca racers.

Many Swiftsure veterans will be here to pit their skills against the strongest tides of the year in the race acknowledged as the Pacific Northwest's toughest.

MAUI COMPETITORS

Among them are H. L. Kotkins' Diamond Head, John Long's Mary Bower, K. W. Browne's Norwester and the navy's ketch, HMCS Oriole, skippered by Geoff Hilliard.

Several of those that competed in the race from Victoria to Maui will be competing, including Bill Killam's Porpoise 111, which won the race.

One Victoria-Maui veteran favored to do well because of her light-displacement and speed is Don Lawson's Cubara of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

Other Maui contenders in this weekend's sailout are Mary Bower, D. D. Nielsen's Moonglow III, Paul Cote's Jeunesse and another RVYC entry, Dave Angus' Tiffany.

Swiftsure fever will reach a peak Friday afternoon as HMCS Cowichan and HMCS Miramichi steam into the Inner Harbor to join the festivities.

FOREST OF SPARS

Fender to fender, and signal flags flying in a kaleidoscope of color from a forest of spars, yachts and their crews will stand by, waiting for the roll call, to begin at 7:50 p.m.

Humphrey Golby will read the roll call from HMCS Cowichan. On completion of the ceremony, acting mayor Ald. Clyde Savage will welcome the visiting yachtsmen.

Adding its own contribution to the evening, the Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps will perform a sunset ceremony on the lawns of the Legislative Buildings.

A series of films on sailing will also be presented at the Provincial Museum.

50-HOUR LIMIT

Throughout the race, which has a 50-hour time limit for the first boat, and a 74-hour time limit for all competitors, officials will plot the course of each yacht, relaying information from escort vessels and patrolling planes.

Those waiting ashore will be able to keep an up-to-date check through a master chart in a window at Eaton's which will be manned by officials on a round-the-clock basis.

MEAN TIDE LURKS AT RACE ROCKS

Strategy and good navigators will be at a premium this weekend when Swiftsure and Juan de Fuca sailors contend with some of the meanest tides in the classics' history.

Shortly before the race begins at 9:30 a.m. Saturday off Brotchie Ledge, a strong flood tide will find the yachts beating their way to Race Rocks with a time limit of about 1½ hours before full flood challenges them with an adverse five or six knots' pull at the Race.

Humphrey Golby, 'Mr. Swifsture' in racing circles, predicts that "unless they get brisk winds . . . 10 knots or more . . . the fleet can be really separated at this point with the advantage going to the light-displacement faster boats."

Timing will be the deciding factor again at the outward marks of Swiftsure and Clallam Bay, turning mark for the smaller Juan de Fuca entries.

With a strong ebb tide running almost all night those yachts still ghosting their way up the Strait may be stymied by the usual lack of wind during those hours.

Skippers and crews of the 164 entries are praying that strong winds will be their allies in their fight against the adverse tide conditions.

As a safety precaution many yachts are taking on extra anchor lines so as to be able to wait out the tide if necessary.

ISRAELI PLANES DOWN SYRIAN MiG

By UPI

Israeli planes battled Syrian MiGs over Quneitra in the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights today and shot down one of them in a dogfight nearly two miles up, an Israeli military spokesman reported in Jerusalem.

It was the second outbreak of fighting between Israeli and Syrian forces this week. Ground forces battled in the Quneitra area earlier this week in the first such outbreak since the 1967 six-day war.

Fighting flared elsewhere along the cease-fire line with rockets reported landing in the town of Jericho.

Troop Cutback 'Negotiable'

BRUSSELS (CP)—Canada appeared today to be yielding moderately to strong pressure from allies to ease its planned "phased reduction" of its NATO forces in Europe.

After sessions with NATO colleagues disenchanted with the Canadian proposal, Defence Minister Cadieux indicated to reporters Wednesday night that both the size and the timing of the Canadian cuts now are negotiable.

On Wednesday, a conference source released the first word that Canada was prepared to review its decision to reduce NATO forces but no details were released at that time.

A high American source said that the United States has urged the Canadian government to review its proposals—the outcome of a long reappraisal of foreign and defence policy. He added: "This is not the time for reduction."

While Cadieux refused to disclose figures on the size of the proposed Canadian cut in European forces, this official said the U.S. impression was that Canada wanted to slice them by two-thirds of strength.

These figures, the first specific suggestion of the size of the Canadian reductions, purported to be the American impression of what Cadieux told U.S. Defence Secretary Melvin Laird at a pre-meeting private session.

REFUSES TO SAY

Cadieux told reporters, in a sparring session in which he declined to reveal much, that the man who issued them must know more than he did. However, he refused to deny or confirm them.

The minister was playing the cards close to the vest here because the Canadian procedure is not to make public the reduction proposals until Cadieux reports to Parliament on June 2.

He made these points:

1. Canada hopes to have its European "adjustment" completed by 1972.

2. The existing brigade group of 5,500 men in West Germany would be replaced by a smaller mobile unit transportable by air. The size was unspecified, but Cadieux said it would be bigger than a regiment.

3. There would have to be "some reduction" in the size of the air division in West Germany, though the minister said this would "not necessarily" be the 20-per-cent cut planned for last year but deferred through 1969 after the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia alarmed NATO.

4. There would be a "study of all naval services in the near future."

N-War Guidelines Reviewed

LONDON (AP) — U.S. Defence Secretary Melvin Laird and six NATO colleagues opened talks today on guidelines for the use of nuclear weapons in Europe to protect the North Atlantic allies.

The defence ministers of the United States, Britain, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Turkey and Denmark had before them a top-secret study by Britain and West Germany on how the NATO nuclear might stationed in Europe can be used best to deter a Soviet attack.

Earlier British research showed that use of NATO's tactical nuclear weapons on a European battlefield and the Soviet retaliation that probably would follow would devastate the area. The possibility that West Germany would be the battlefield spurred the search for alternative tactics that might deter the Russians from an attack.

DEMONSTRATION BOMB

One suggestion was explosion of a "demonstration bomb" in an area where it could do little harm. The idea would be to warn the Soviets the West was prepared to use nuclear weapons if necessary.

Other proposals included the use of maritime nuclear explosions and atomic land mines on possible Soviet invasion routes.

British Defence Minister Denis Healey, co-author of the British-German study, has said that in the event of a major Soviet attack, NATO would have to surrender or use nuclear weapons within a few days because of the superior conventional striking force of the Soviet bloc. He says this superiority is more than 2 to 1 in infantry formations, nearly 2 to 1 in aircraft, and nearly 3 to 1 in armored units.

Districts Get Loans for Land

OTTAWA (CP)—The government has displayed more of its housing policy by removing the freeze on public housing projects and promising loans to provinces and municipalities to buy land for private homes.

Robert Andras, minister without portfolio given responsibility for housing after Paul Hellyer resigned from the cabinet last month, announced removal of the freeze as the Commons opened second-reading debate on the government's housing bill Wednesday.

At a press conference today, Mr. Andras said the government will give "clear signals on the fate of 11 frozen urban renewal schemes within a matter of weeks." The policy decision on the freeze imposed last fall will follow an intense personal examination starting today.

STALLED PROJECTS

Five of the $40,000,000 worth of stalled projects are in B.C., at Cloverdale, Ladner, Port Coquitlam, Vancouver and New Westminster. Five are in Ontario and one is at Calgary.

The projects were frozen largely because of a government view that they tended to eliminate usable housing, thus intensifying the housing shortage.

Mr. Andras said he hoped there will be "an informal effect" on the nature of urban renewal applications in the light of the government's views.

He hoped the same effect would apply in the character of public housing projects. In both public housing and urban renewal, the government wants more emphasis on housing content and rehabilitation of existing buildings.

He doubted that his housing legislation, which includes the freeing of house mortgage interest rate, will result in an immediate decrease in the price of houses.

But ultimately the government moves to increase the supply of housing, build up serviced land banks and so on will have their effect.

INTEREST RATES

He said the theory is that mortgage interest rates—currently 9¾ per cent—won't rise any higher when the rate is freed. Now it is set at 2¼ per cent above the government's bond rate.

Mr. Andras said the tendency is for the maximum established to become the minimum. The pegged rate gives lenders a "target to shoot at."

The bill removes interest ceilings on National Housing Act mortgages—now 9¾ per cent—and much of the cabinet's control over Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

Informants said the government now favors row housing and dispersed accommodation rather than the big high-rise projects.

Mr. Andras also said he will amend the bill to permit provincial and municipal governments to borrow from Ottawa to buy land for building private houses.

The National Housing Act now provides for 90 per cent federal loans to provinces, municipalities or public housing agencies to buy and service land for public housing. The amendment would extend these loans to cover private housing as well.

Opposition criticism Wednesday focused mainly on the housing problems of low-income workers, high interest rates and growing land costs.

The Ra Sails On

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — Thor Heyerdahl's papyrus boat Ra gave its position today as 80 miles north of Lanzarote, the northeast island in the Canaries group, and said all was "going well" on the voyage across the Atlantic.

Norman Baker, the American navigator, said published reports that Dr. Yuri Cenkevich, the expedition's Russian medical officer, was ill with a high fever were erroneous.

The report from the Ra, which is attempting to prove Egyptians could have sailed to Latin America in papyrus boats centuries ago, was picked up by amateur radio operators here.

Offer Raised In Brewery Takeover Bid

By G. S. KENT
Times Business Editor

New York-based Philip Morris Corp. today raised its bid to take over Canada's largest brewing complex by $3 a share to $15 for a possible $163.2 million total value to Canadian Breweries Ltd. shareholders.

Meanwhile the Times learned in a telephone interview with the Canadian spokesmen for the takeover that buyers of Canbrew stock at lower recent prices will stand to make $30 million profit as a result of the bid.

A local investment dealer said he "would not rule out the possibility of an investigation of some kind."

The man who helped mastermind the Philip Morris bid is Ward C. Pitfield, Toronto, 43-year-old president of Pitfield, Mackay, Ross and Co., investment dealers, who said organization came from both sides of the border.

He said he had been "at it since last December," and that the current proposal for control of Canbrew came after "broad discussion" involving other prospective buyers.

Pitfield's firm heads a dealer syndicate representing Philip Morris to shareholders in Canada.

Pitfield's remarks came as some surprise to the investment community and mitigated against the notion that the offer for take over was American-inspired.

Pitfield said "it was our desire to take a firm hand in Canadian Breweries." He said it was felt that the 10 per cent ownership represented by Rothman's of Pall Mall Canada Ltd. was not sufficient to ensure the sort of growth expected.

Canbrew earnings have fallen consistently since 1965 and the company's share of the beer market has dropped from 48 per cent to about 35 per cent. Most of Canbrew's sales are in the U.S. and Britain.

Pitfield said a "meeting of minds" was reached with Philip Morris Corp., which was felt to have the management and marketing ideas needed by Canbrew to regain its position.

The U.S. company offered $12 per share for 50 per cent of the outstanding shares of Canadian Breweries, or a total of 10.88

COMING HOME to the command ship is the Apollo 10 lunar module after its close-up view of the moon's surface. (AP Wirephoto.)

Film Acts as Roadmap For Apollo 11 Crew

SPACE CENTRE, Houston (UPI) — The space agency today released breathtaking film and photographs shot by Apollos 10's moon pilots that will serve as a roadmap for man's first landing on the lunar surface in July.

As the film preview of man's first descent to the moon were released, the Apollo 11 astronauts who will make that landing made their first full-scale rehearsal of a lunar approach shown in the movies.

Astronauts Neil A. Armstrong and Edwin E. "Buz" Aldrin spent today in a moon landing simulator at Cape Kennedy, practising the final approach and landing with mission controllers in Houston as though it was the real thing.

It was the first simulation linking mission control and the astronauts at the cape, a space agency spokesman said. Many others will follow, the official said, to check every step of the flight to send Americans to walk the waterless lunar seas.

The 205 feet of movies released today were the second group of photographs made public from the Apollo 10 mission. There also were 87 frames of color still photography. All the shots were more spectacular than film released Wednesday.

Space agency geologist John Dietrich said Apollo 10's crewmen missed getting movies of the prime landing site as they swooped to within 9.5 miles of it, apparently because they jiggled the camera accidentally. But he said they got "perfect" scenes of the approach to that site.

U.S. Onslaught Rips Viet Truce

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. forces crashed a Viet Cong strategy meeting 28 miles northwest of Saigon today during a 48 hour ceasefire the Viet Cong had proclaimed in honor of Buddha's birthday.

The Viet Cong ceasefire began at 7 a.m. Southern allied forces were to start a 24-hour truce period at 6 a.m. Friday. Meanwhile, more than 50 southern allied operations of battalion size or larger continued without letup.

At least 50 Viet Cong were reported killed in the action northwest of Saigon. Initial reports said one American was killed and seven wounded.

"They were congregating in there for their stand-down period," said a U.S. military spokesman. "We had intelligence information they were going to be in there for a meeting to plan actions for summer campaign next month. We were not standing down."

It was a sparsely settled farm area of scattered houses, rice paddies and bamboo hedgerows. Military spokesmen said an American plane with a loudspeaker flew over, urging the Viet Cong to surrender and calling on the rest of the people to move out.

The spokesmen said about 200 women and children moved out, but the Viet Cong started shooting with machine-guns and rocket grenades.

Ship Crushes Two In Launch Mishap

COLLINGWOOD, Ont. (CP) — Two men were reported killed and at least 28 injured today when a 730-foot self-unloading cargo ship slid into the water accidentally minutes before it was to be launched at Collingwood Shipyards.

About 100 men were reported working under the boat when the accident occurred and company officials were not immediately certain how many escaped.

Divers began searching the water for injured men and an ambulance shuttle service was set up to take the injured to hospital.

Five of those taken to hospital suffered minor injuries and were released. The others required additional examination.

The 25,000-ton ship is believed the largest built at the shipyards.

The accident occurred when workers began to knock the stern blocks loose, and the ship suddenly began to slide into the water. The bow swung, trapping some men underneath.

TRUDEAU: Think Regional, One Canada Just a Slogan

This is the final article by political analyst Peter Regenstreif on Prime Minister Trudeau after one year in office. Today's survey covers how optimistic the country is about the future and over economic matters.

By PETER REGENSTREIF

Voters are almost evenly divided between being more optimistic or less about the future of their country after a year with Pierre Trudeau as their prime minister according to a national survey.

They are also split over their own economic situation and prospects.

Regionally, the patterns are related. Those areas that are optimistic about personal economic prospects tend to be optimistic about the nation's political future. The pessimists about personal finances are political pessimists.

747 Interviewed

These findings emerge from a survey of 747 voters interviewed in their homes. The survey began on April 20 — exactly one year to the day that Trudeau succeeded Lester Pearson as prime minister.

Voters were asked about the job Trudeau was doing, how they would vote in a federal election, the issues they considered important and their preferences among the party leaders for prime minister.

They were also asked whether they were more optimistic or less about the future of Canada "now that Pierre Trudeau has been prime minister for a year."

While 26 per cent replied they were more optimistic, another 23 per cent claimed they were less optimistic with 52 per cent stating that their feelings had not changed over the year.

Optimistic

The Prairies is the most pessimistic region: only 18 per cent are more optimistic while 33 per cent are less optimistic.

In all other areas, the optimistics outnumber the pessimists. Ontario is the most optimistic province followed by British Columbia.
